By CLARISSA V. DAVID

Jess Mac of Dandan village woke up early on Wednesday, determined to find a job that would help him provide for his family, particularly his ailing mother.

"I just want a decent job," said Mac. "Maybe I can have a new kind of job, different from my previous job," said the 33-year-old jobseeker, who has had prior work experience driving heavy equipment.

A former greens keeper in Guam, Mac was among the hundreds of jobless U.S. workers who attended the job fair hosted by the CNMI Department of Labor. A total of 27 employers—both private

Dr. Algaier is MHS' most outstanding educator this year

» Six others honored

By MONETH G. DEPOSA
Moneth_deposa@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

Dr. Chas Algaier was adjudged as Marianas High School's most outstanding educator and was bestowed the prestigious Teacher of the Year award this school year.

Algaier has been an educator in the CNMI for 17 years, the first 10 at Northern Marianas College. This year marks his seventh year with the Public School System and his first time to be conferred the honor.

He described the recognition as an honor, knowing the selection was made by his equally deserving colleagues. "I am not expecting this and I feel honored and lucky that my colleagues selected me," he told Saipan Tribune, adding that he was among the school's three finalists for the award.

Algaier obtained his bachelor's degree in Education from the University of Kansas and his master's degree in International Studies at Ohio University. His doctorate is in leadership studies, obtained from the University of San Diego.

For the past seven years, Algaier has been mentoring students in AP Linguistics, AP World History, and AP Psychology.

When asked what prompted him to pursue a career in teacher, Algaier recalled—with tongue firmly in cheek—being motivated by the idea that teachers have long vacations. "That was probably my prime motivation in college: I could see growing up that teachers had long vacations," he laughed.

He quickly turned serious, however, saying that, as he got into education, "I found that I enjoyed working with students, transferring knowledge, giving students the idea that they could be successful. I think failing in school is also a great motivator for teachers. If you fail as a student and later learn to succeed, you will understand the link between failure and success. If you embrace teaching, you can become very successful in helping students to understand the link themselves."

Each day, Algaier attends to about 110 students from all grade levels. Besides his busy classroom schedule, he is also an active member of the school faculty and chairperson of the Social Studies Department. He was key to the establishment and operation of the AP classes at the school and instrumental in bringing related summer institutes for teachers to Saipan. Algaier was also the chairperson of the school's accreditation team.

Interactions with students are the most enjoyable and memorable part of his job. To become effective, Algaier believes that a teacher must understand the individual student's needs so he can provide a proper response. His current AP class in world history, for example, is mostly composed of freshmen who may lack both procedural and content knowledge when compared to their junior and senior classmates.

consider what is like to be a freshman in a college level class. They have different needs, they are still mastering the ability to think at a college level, and they have to learn how to get to that point. Their needs force me to examine and refine my teaching methods and focus," he said.

Among the many lessons that Algaier has learned from his students are: "Don't make assumptions about students. Don't assume things because your assumptions will often be wrong. Don't have confidence of what you think you know because that confidence may often be misplaced. You have to learn new things every year to best understand what the students are thinking and of their needs."

Other awardees

MHS conferred its Teacher Aide of the Year honor on Dominic Fitial, who has been with the school's special education program since 2005 and was also accorded the same honor last school year. The 43-year-old employee said he finds satisfaction and fulfillment in caring for special children and vows to continue doing his best.

Tita Gabredo was adjudged as the school's Support Staff of the Year. She started working for MHS in 2005. This is her second time to be given the award; the first was in 2009. This mother of two handles the school's time-keeping, performs administrative work, and assists students and staff, among other tasks.

The Maintenance of the Year awardee is Emory Fitial, a PSS employee for 21 years. He first served William S. Reyes Elementary School for 10 years before moving to MHS in 2000. This year marks his 11th year of service to the oldest high school on island. He was also the school's Maintenance of the Year awardee last school year. More than any awards and recognition, Fitial said that just by knowing that all students and staff are safe and secure on campus is enough reward for his hard work.

MHS conferred its Counselor of the Year honor on Janice Muña, who has been with PSS for seven years now. She started as a classroom teacher at WSR in 2004 and became a counselor at Chacha Oceanview Junior High in 2006 until she moved to MHS in 2009. This is her first award from PSS. Like the other awardees, Muña was elated to receive the recognition and shared the honor with fellow employees whom she said all do a good job for the students. She considers seeing the direct impact of counseling on students as the most rewarding part of her profession.

Patty Aguon-Cruz was hailed as the school's Librarian of the Year. She was first conferred the honor in 2008 and was chosen for the overall title that same year. Aguon-Cruz attends to about 150 students every day. Because the library is the heart of every school, Aguon-Cruz emphasized the importance of making available all reading materials and references that will help students learn.

MHS' Instructor of the Year is Ernest Torres, who is with the school's JROTC program. This is also his first time to be honored with the award.

MHS principal Cherlyn Cabrera said they are very pleased with the performances of all the seven awardees. "One thing I can say is that they are here for the right reason. They care about our students, they believe in our students, and they are very involved with our students. We're truly proud of them," she said.

MHS is home to 1,371 students and 68 personnel.

Rota center sees 59 pct. hike in patient numbers since '98

By MONETH G. DEPOSA
REPORTER

Acting Rota Health Center resident director Edward Maratita disclosed yesterday that more and more island residents are getting sick, as shown by the center's records in the last 13 years.

He disclosed that the center only had 705 patients back in fiscal year 1998, which translates to about 35 patients every day. In fiscal year 2011, which just ended on Sept. 30, 2011, that number has grown to 1,100 patients—a jump of 59 percent that translates to 56 patients seen daily.

Maratita described this significant increase as alarming and is something that needs to be prioritized by both the municipality and the health-care corporation, which now handles all Commonwealth health centers and clinics.

While the patient count is increasing, the center's workforce is going the other way, continuing to decline year after year due to budget constraints, Maratita said. At present, the center has 52 personnel, including just two physicians and seven nurses.

Among the important positions that need to be filled are the pharmacist and physician assistant posts, he said. He hopes the new corporation will look at this as among the areas that need to be addressed at once.

"Our concern is the delivery of healthcare services to our people. I hope, under the corporation, we can fill those important positions," Maratita said.

Since Oct. 1, all health centers on Saipan, Tinian, and Rota have been under the corporation, which now functions as an independent agency. The corporation also absorbed all the functions of the Department of Public Health. About 600 personnel were absorbed by corporation.

Calvo's Insurance chips in for upcoming Hyatt Golf Classic

REPORTER

Another business has expressed its support for the 16th Club at the Hyatt Golf Classic by donating money to further its mission of helping Make-A-Wish Foundation grant the wishes of children with life-threatening conditions.

Calvo's Insurance general manager Eli Buenaventura presented the $1,000 check to event committee chair Michael Wilson on Tuesday.

This was the first time for Calvo's Insurance to donate to the annual golf tournament. "We believe in the mission of this golf event and we hope for its success," Buenaventura told Saipan Tribune.

The 2011 Club at the Hyatt Golf Classic is slated for Nov. 12 at the LaoLao Bay Golf Resort. Registration is at 6:30am, with shotgun start at 7:30am.

Early bird registration fee for Club Elan and Club at the Hyatt members is only $95 per person, with payment to be made at least 72 hours prior to the event or on Nov. 9.

Regular registration fee for members is $110 per person and non-members fee costs $120 per person.

Wilson, who is also the Food and Beverage director for Hyatt, said that Calvo's Insurance joins their roster of corporate sponsors and donors.

This year's hole-in-one prizes include a 2012 Hyundai from Triple J Motors, $25,000 from Bank of Hawaii, and a chance to tour Japan courtesy of Delta Air Lines.

"We also have the fantastic gala banquet that everyone looks forward to," added Wilson. The banquet will be held at the Hyatt Regency poolside and costs $35 per person.

submitted his resignation letter to Attorney General Edward T. Buckingham.

Ernest refused to comment yesterday. Buckingham did not reply to two emails requesting comment about Ernest's resignation.

According to sources, Ernest's last day as chief prosecutor was yesterday and that he is now using all his available leave time.

Ernest, however, will remain at the OAG and will possibly work in the Civil Division, at least two lawyers told Saipan Tribune over the weekend.

The reason behind Ernest's resignation was not immediately clear.

Sources said that Ernest has enjoyed strong support from fellow prosecutors and staff because of his professionalism in running the OAG's Criminal Division.

Under Ernest's term, problems relating to case backlogs was addressed and the age of cases was significantly reduced.

Buckingham appointed Ernest as chief prosecutor in June 2010 after Rosemond B. Santos resigned from the post.

Prior to joining the OAG, Ernest served as Senate legal counsel for five years.

ed at the committee level a couple of months back.

"There is nothing certain until a vote actually takes place and we continue to work toward that end. I think that the sooner we act on HR 1466, the better for our U.S. citizens who happen to have immediate relatives who are third-country nationals. The House leadership knows that HR 1466 is a time-sensitive legislation and some have shared their own support for timely action on the bill," he said.

After the House, Sablan's measure would still have to be approved by the U.S. Senate before going to President Barack Obama's desk for action.

In an interview with KSPN 2 last night, Sablan said he hopes that HR 1466 is passed before the end of the year.

In an earlier report, Senate staffer Allen Stayman said it is possible that the Senate will consider and pass HR 1466 if it manages to hurdle the House.

Sablan's H.R. 1466 proposes a

"CNMI-only resident status" for immediate relatives of U.S. citizens as of May 8, 2008, and continuing to be on the islands, CNMI permanent residents, those born in the CNMI between Jan. 1, 1974 and Jan. 9, 1978, and the spouses or children, "as defined in section 101(b)(1) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1101(b)(1)), of an alien described in subclauses (I) or (II)."

Gov. Benigno R. Fitial is opposed to HR 1466 because of its provision to extend status to alien workers with U.S. citizen children, regardless of age.

Positive news

United Workers Movement-NMI president Rabby Syed said he welcomes Sablan's comments but said his group continues to ask the congressman to include all alien workers—even those without U.S. citizen children—in his bill.

"Definitely positive news for guest workers who are included in the bill. But we are still hoping Kilili will include other guest workers in his bill," he said, while adding that UWM-NMI has not abandoned its dream of guest workers in the CNMI obtaining green cards and a pathway to citizenship.

Workers advocate Malou Berueco said that Sablan's bill may be too late for hundreds of jobless alien workers with U.S. citizen children because they will be out of status after Nov. 27, 2011.

"It's good that it will be approved by the House. But my worry is that by that time a lot of those affected will already be out of status and under Sablan's bill they will no longer be covered by his bill," she said.

Dekada president Boni Sagana, for his part, said he is thankful for Sablan's "sincere help and untiring work" to move his bill.

Asked what he is doing to help the plight of jobless aliens with U.S. citizen children after the expiration of umbrella permits, Sablan said he has already requested Department of Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano to grant them parole-in-place.

"We continue to work to encourage DHS to provide a short term administrative remedy for those covered by HR 1466," he said.

JOB FAIR

businesses and government agencies—accepted applications for jobs ranging from technicians and housekeepers to engineers and managers at the Pedro P. Tenorio Multi-Purpose Center in Susupe yesterday.

Mac, who moved back to Saipan after being jobless in Guam for two years, is optimistic that the fair will pave the way for his next job. "This event is a good opportunity for job applicants like me," he added.

Like Mac, other hopefuls lined up as early as 8am to complete application forms or submit their résumés to prospective employers.

Ruth Shorey Tenorio, 20, arrived from Pohnpei in 2010 with a goal to finish school. Unable to meet that goal, Tenorio is now looking for a job as a cashier or housekeeper in stores and hotels.

"I need to work because I'm staying with my husband and we want to have enough to support ourselves and our families," said Tenorio, who worked as a cashier and a babysitter back in Pohnpei.

Her husband, Melchor Tenorio, said it's been a month since he last had a job. He used to work with Herman's Bakery.

"I am looking to apply for a job as a warehouse stocker," said Tenorio, 21, who submitted application forms to Fiesta Resort and Spa, Joeten, and KFC, among others.

While yesterday's crowd saw job seekers of different ages, a large number were young U.S. workers keen to obtain work experience at an early age as they, too, have been badly affected by the continuing economic decline.

Kimberly Magofna, 18, just graduated from Kagman High School and is awaiting phone calls and interview appointments. In the meantime, she keeps submitting application forms.

"It [doesn't] matter what kind of job. I just want to gain more work experience," said the Tanapag resident who was once employed at the Chacha Ocean View Jr. High School doing administrative work.

Eighteen-year-old Jamilice Camacho said she is prepared to juggle her time as a freshman student taking up Elementary Education at the Northern Marianas College while taking a part-time job.

"I've been looking for a part-time job for four months now and it's been difficult because there's a lot of people like me that are looking for jobs," said Camacho, who came to the venue with her mom and a friend.

Camacho, a Chalan Kanoa resident, said she is "pretty positive" that she will be hired. "It's better to be confident and just be hopeful," she added.

CNMI Center for Living Independently director Lydia D. Igitol, who came to the job fair to assist two of their consumers find a job, said the event is an "opportunity the island never had," particularly for the youth.

"Seeing the youth here gives me great hope that people would recognize that there is a need for employment among U.S. workers. Here you can see the actual demand," she told Saipan Tribune.

Igitol added that having even just some of people with disabilities hired through these job fairs would give hope to others. "They just need encouragement," she said.

Fiesta Resort and Spa Human Resource manager Lupe Flores said the job fair is a "good venue" to look for qualified U.S. workers who can fill their 40 advertised positions.

"We're trying to reach out to all qualified U.S. workers. That's our objective," said Flores, who also noted that they will start scheduling interviews by next week.

As the Nov. 27 deadline for foreign workers draws near, Saipan Ice & Water Co. human resource staffer Maxima Lisua said that while their company will keep workers in skilled positions such as electricians and accountants, they are looking for U.S. workers to fill their anticipated vacancies for production and delivery staff.

"It's a good event and I'm hopeful that we can find workers who are devoted and would come to work every day," said Lisua, adding that they will begin with their selection and interview process next week.

Hafa Adai Beach Hotel HR manager Juan I. Tenorio said their company is now interviewing applicants that applied for the 48 positions they announced during the Department of Commerce-sponsored job expo last month.

They only set up a booth at yesterday's job fair to inform job applicants about the duties and responsibilities of the positions they want to apply for as well as company expectations and standard, he said.

"The more we educate applicants, the more empowerment we can give to them so they can do what they need to do to prepare themselves to be in the job market," added Tenorio.

Labor Secretary Gil San Nicolas thanked all participants for the "good turnout." He emphasized that the event is a partnership between the government and the private sector.

San Nicolas encouraged U.S. workers not to give up. "Continue to search for the job you're interested in. Continue to follow up with those companies that you have applied with."

Washington delegate Gregorio Kilili Sablan, who was also at the job fair, commended the Department of Labor "for a very successful event."

Pangelinan allegedly caught anew in Internet fraud dealings

By FERDIE DE LA TORRE
ferdie_delatorre@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

Benny K. Pangelinan, a former Coastal Resources Management official who has already served a three-year prison sentence for wire fraud and is under investigation again for allegedly committing the same offenses, was reportedly caught anew wiring money to a person that he claims to be his girlfriend from Australia whom he met on the Internet.

U.S. Probation Officer Gregory F. Arriola asked the U.S. District Court for the NMI yesterday to revoke Pangelinan's supervised release for violating his probation conditions.

The district court summoned Pangelinan to appear in court today, Thursday, to explain why his supervised release should not be revoked.

In a petition filed in September, Arriola said that Pangelinan borrowed $21,450 from a couple and over $11,000 from a family member, both with promises to double the amounts once he gets large sums of money that he was expecting to receive.

In his supplemental declaration filed yesterday, Arriola said that he went to Pangelinan's house on Monday, Oct. 31, to inform him of an upcoming counseling session with Marianas Psychiatric Services but did not find him there. Arriola said he later found Pangelinan standing in front of a building across the Town House Shopping Center talking on a cell phone. Pangelinan was later seen entering Raj Shopping in the same area.

When he walked into the shop, Arriola said that, Pangelinan, who was sitting behind a desktop computer, immediately closed an email account and attempted to conceal a piece of paper that he crumpled and dropped on the floor. Pangelinan allegedly explained that he was trying to contact his son in Oregon through the Internet.

Arriola reminded him that he has been given specific instructions to stop using the Internet as he had been communicating with scammers.

Arriola then questioned the shop's owner, who disclosed that Pangelinan was a frequent customer in the past two months and paid mainly for Internet access.

Arriola said that Pangelinan later confessed that the number written on the paper was a Western Union routing number as he was sending money to his girlfriend, Carole J. Millar, in Australia, to help her purchase a ticket to Saipan.

When asked where he was getting the money, Pangelinan said that he was using his retirement pay. Her ticket allegedly cost $2,000 and the $300 that Pangelinan just sent her was the final amount needed to buy the ticket.

Arriola said he attempted again to explain that he was being manipulated by online scammers, but Pangelinan stated that Millar should arrive on Saipan within the week. Arriola said he advised Pangelinan to return home and to cease accessing the Internet.

In January 2007, a federal jury found Pangelinan guilty of five wire fraud charges, stemming from his activities to defraud potential investors and his involvement in various Internet fraud schemes.

In April 2007, the court sentenced him to three years and one month in prison. After serving the sentence, he was placed on three years of supervised release.

The court ordered Pangelinan to pay a total of $129,250 in restitution to five victims.

Woman allegedly broke car's windshields

A woman who was allegedly beaten up and choked by her boyfriend with a PVC pipe in March was arrested Tuesday for allegedly smashing the windshields of her boyfriend's car.

Amanda O. Kaipat, 23, was arrested for criminal mischief and disturbing the peace.

Assistant public defender Douglas Hartig recused himself from representing Kaipat as the Public Defender's Office serves as counsel for her boyfriend, Christopher R. Dela Cruz, in the previous incident where she was the alleged victim.

Superior Court associate judge David A. Wiseman said that the court will appoint a private counsel for Kaipat.

Her bail was set at $1,500 cash. Preliminary hearing is on Nov. 9, 2011, at 9am.

Detective Elias Saralu told the court that Kaipat, in a fit of jealousy, used a belt to smash both front and rear windshields of Dela Cruz's car that was parked in front of an apartment in Chalan Kanoa Tuesday morning.

Last March, Kaipat sustained multiple injuries after Dela Cruz allegedly beat her up and choked her with a PVC pipe at his residence in Kagman.

Dela Cruz, 28, was arrested for assault with a dangerous weapon, assault and battery, and disturbing the peace. He is out on bail. The case is still pending. (Ferdie de la Torre)

Aetna postpones contract's renewal to January

By MONETH G. DEPOSA
Moneth_deposa@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

Health insurance carrier Aetna Global has agreed to postpone the renewal date of its contract by two months while it waits for the Fitial administration to decide on its proposal to raise premium rates under a new contract.

Retirement Fund administrator Richard Villagomez said yesterday that the postponement means that coverage and premiums for all retirees and members will remain intact.

Aetna's contract, renewed every year, was up for renewal on Tuesday, Nov. 1.

At a recent Fund board meeting, Villagomez said that the Fitial administration has yet to decide on the company's new proposed premium rates.

The insurance carrier had presented the government two options, both of which would increase the amount of premiums that will be paid by members. The specifics of these options were not made public.

"While we sort this out, Aetna has agreed to postpone the implementation date of the renewal terms from Nov. 1, 2011, to Jan. 1, 2012. Coverage and premiums will remain intact and the same until Jan. 1, 2012," Villagomez said in an email yesterday, adding that he cannot divulge specifics of the proposal until the administration selects a renewal option.

According to Villagomez, most members have reported being "very satisfied" with the health insurance coverage provided by Aetna.

The Group Health and Life Insurance Program, or GHLIP, is a government program and is only administered by the Fund. Any final decision on the contract with Aetna lies with the Executive Branch.

Villagomez also disclosed that the applicability of the federal Health Care Reform Act to the CNMI plan is being re-assessed at the request of some lawmakers and the Fitial administration. "If applicable, the coverage mandated by the Act is nice but is not free. It will increase premiums that we all have to pay for—active employees, retirees, and the CNMI government," he said.

Since the Fund pays 50 percent of premium contributions for GHLI, board chair Sixto Igisomar said that the options presented by Aetna would also mean a substantially increased burden for the Fund.

MPS-3 commander says Saipan 'is sweet deal job'

By MARK RABAGO

ASSOCIATE EDITOR

The commander of Maritime Prepositioning Squadron Three on Saipan said she is lucky to have been assigned in the Northern Marianas and feels as if her posting is "a sweet deal job for a U.S. Navy captain."

Speaking at the Saipan Chamber of Commerce meeting yesterday at the Saipan Grand Hotel's Seaside Hall, U.S. Navy Capt. Deidre L. McLay said that the military staff that oversees the MPS-3 squadron is actually very small and are only aboard the flagship, USNS 1st Lt. Jack Lummus.

"We oversee the readiness of the 10 ships that are part of the squadron and then if there's a mission, we help coordinate all the other military entities that have to come together the prepositioning assets," she said.

McLay, who came to the meeting in aquaflage—slang for the U.S. Navy's new work uniform—said that since taking charge of the squadron in May 2011, she has pretty much enjoyed her tour of duty in the CNMI.

"I have enjoyed Saipan very much. This is a sweet deal job for a U.S. Navy captain. It's a one-year assignment and essentially as long as North Korea doesn't invade South Korea or China doesn't attack Taiwan, it usually is a very enjoyable year. We have time to take advantage of the recreational facilities. I've taken up scuba diving. I've learned to take up golf and I'm a huge history buff so the chance to visit the park locations and other historic sites... has been very special to me," she said.

McLay said the main purpose of prepositioning ships is to solve the U.S. military's timeline problem in the event of war.

"Basically you have floating warehouses of war-fighting material so in case you have a problem in the Western Pacific, the stuff will come to the scene of action faster than if you had ships coming from the continental U.S.," she said.

She said five of the ships that are usually assigned off the Saipan Lagoon are laden with U.S. Marine Corps prepositioning material.

"Five here are full of Marine Corps stuff. Every ship is full of deck after deck of tanks, Humvees, refueling ships, Seabees equipment, almost anything you can imagine to support a full expeditionary brigade, which is a whole lot of Marines," she said.

Three of the squadron's ships, meanwhile, are full of U.S.

Army prepositioning material and "they usually hang out in Korea," while the rest are for the U.S. Air Force and a special offshore patrol and discharge ship, also often detailed in North Korea, according to McLay.

While she joked about the U.S. Navy's new camouflage uniforms and how easy it is to get a driver's license on Saipan, McLay also took the opportunity to clarify some misconceptions about her squadron's mission. "Sometimes people think during humanitarian or disaster assistance missions, we can just take one of these ships and do something. Not really. Only if the Joint Chiefs of Staff authorize that deployment and then also send all the people that are able to do it," she said.

New vehicle sales up 16 percent in Oct.

By MARK RABAGO
mark_rabago@saipantribune.com
ASSOCIATE EDITOR

For only the second month this year, new vehicle sales posted an increase last month, with 42 units sold in October compared to 36 during the same period last year, according to the Commonwealth Auto Dealers Association.

Broken down, the 16-percent uptick includes 26 cars, eight sport utility vehicles, four trucks, and three vans, based on CADA's monthly sales and market share report.

Save for last month and June, when new car sales were up 35 percent, CADA figures are down the rest of the year.

CADA president Doug Brennan attributed the positive sales figures in October to Japan finally recovering from the triple disasters that also devastated automotive makers' manufacturing sites, especially in Sendai, in March.

"The disruption in parts and vehicle production caused by the Japan earthquake/tsunami/nuclear disaster caused quite a lull in the vehicle market. As parts and vehicle production facilities are coming back on line, more inventory is available," he said.

By dealerships, Microl Corp. sold 20 new vehicles last month compared to 11 a year ago, an 81.8-percent increase. The 20 vehicles sold translate to a 47.6-percent market share.

Joeten Motors sold the same number of vehicles last month at 14 units compared to October 2010—38.8 percent of all new vehicle sales of CADA.

Triple J Motors sold eight cars in October 2011—three units off the 11 the dealer sold during the same month last year. That is a 27.7-percent drop in sales and a market share of 30.5 percent.

Brennan, who is also general manager for Microl Corp., said he doesn't actually look at last month's growth as an increase in sales.

"A better description would be a surge in customers who have been waiting patiently for the vehicles they want and are now able to purchase," he said.

Despite the positives for October 2011, year-to-date figures show that new vehicle sales are still down 27.4 percent, as CADA so far has only sold 363 units compared to 499 from January to October 2010.

4 Saipan beach sites red-flagged

The Division of Environment Quality has red-flagged the Grotto Cave, Tank Beach, South Laulau Beach, and Obyan Beach and is advising the public not to fish or swim within 300 feet of these locations for the next 48 hours or until otherwise notified. DEQ said that samples from these locations had excessive concentrations of fecal indicator bacteria (enterococci) that exceeded the CNMI Marine Water Quality Standards.

These bacteria can indicate the presence of human and animal waste in the water. Water samples were taken from 12 locations on Saipan this week. For more information, contact DEQ at 664-8500. (DEQ)

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE PEOPLE OF SAIPAN

If you care about the Commonwealth,
Your job, your children,
Your business or your pension

PLEASE READ THIS LETTER!

Hafa Adai!

It is no secret that our government is running out of money. We need additional revenues, or the government will go bankrupt soon.

We already have had layoffs. Good people have lost their jobs. The 4-day workweek means that all regular government employees have been forced to take 20 percent pay cut. The teachers will be next. Without an additional source of funds, I predict the children of the CNMI will have a 4-day school week by the next school year.

In addition, we can expect more layoffs, and pensions will be put at risk. With less money in the hands of our people, private businesses will shut down and go bankrupt. We will become less and less attractive to tourist, which means even less revenue. And so it goes.

There is only one alternative to this gloomy picture, only one way to restore our economy. We must have casinos on Saipan as soon as possible.

Casinos will—

- Bring many more tourists
- Restore and expand airline routes
- Provide more well-paying private-sector jobs for local residents
- Bring back the 5-day workweek
- Secure our children's education
- Attract more investment
- End the layoffs
- Protect Pensions
- Restore the Earned Income Credit (EIC)

The choice is simple: keep doing, nothing, and see the final ruin of our hopes and dreams, or establish casinos on Saipan and revive our economy for a better life for ourselves and our children. There are no other choices.

Man gets 90-day sentence for beating up his girlfriend

Superior Court associate judge Perry B. Inos imposed a 90-day sentence on a man who beat up his girlfriend after a drinking session in Koblerville.

Inos on Monday sentenced Julio Litulumar Emangmai to three years in prison, all suspended except for 90 days, for assault with a dangerous weapon, with credit for time served. This means the 25-year-old Emangmai will no longer serve further jail time.

Emangmai was placed on probation for three years, ordered to pay a $250 fine, $100 court assessment fee, plus a probation fee, required to perform 200 hours of community service, and complete anger management counseling.

The Office of the Attorney General had charged him with assault with a dangerous weapon, assault and battery, and disturbing the peace. He pleaded guilty to assault with a dangerous weapon; the remaining charges were dismissed.

Emangmai beat up his girlfriend on Aug. 2, 2011, on Saipan.

Police officers responded to Alaguan Street in Koblerville at 5:23pm after police received a disturbance call. When two officers arrived at the house, they saw the victim on the ground.

The victim told police that Emangmai repeatedly slapped her and then hit her back several times with a broomstick. (Ferdie de la Torre)

Man beats up woman on Tinian

A woman sustained multiple injuries Sunday after she was allegedly beaten up on Tinian by a man who is on probation for domestic violence on Saipan.

The victim was taken by ambulance to Tinian Health Center due to a laceration above the left eye. She complained of pain in the left ribcage and back.

The suspect, Joseph Naputi Borja, 27, was arrested for assault and battery, disturbing the peace, and contempt of court. The police report did not indicate the victim's relationship with Borja.

Borja's bail was set at $10,000 cash. Preliminary hearing will be on Nov. 8 at 1:30pm.

According to the police report, the victim called 911 on Sunday at 10am to ask for help. When two police officers arrived at Borja's residence, they saw six children crying and yelling in the kitchen. The officers saw the victim lying in bed.

Borja allegedly told the officers that the victim fell and hit her forehead on a wood but one of the children told the officer that she saw Borja punching and kicking her mother. Police immediately arrested Borja.

Borja was sentenced in June to 20 days in prison for domestic violence on Saipan. (Ferdie de la Torre)

House to block legalization of abortion

House Speaker Benigno R. Fitial put his foot down yesterday to any proposal that will change the constitutional provision banning abortion in the Northern Marianas amid renewed debate on the issue. He said the only legislation acceptable to the House leadership is one that will provide penalties against violation of that mandate, but added they have yet to consider enacting such measure. Under the CNMI Constitution, abortion is prohibited on the islands. The Legislature, however, can lift that ban. At present, there is no local statutory law that penalizes the practice here.

ABE wants slice of Compact-Impact funds

The Northern Marianas College Adult Basic Education Program is seeking a fair share to the $1 million Compact-Impact appropriation delivered last week by Office of Insular Affairs Director Danny Aranza, noting that the public institution hosts approximately 27 percent of Micronesian students. ABE Director Fe Y. Calixterio expressed yesterday hopes the local government will not overlook NMC's adult literacy program as it also provides valuable services to students from the Freely Associated States. FAS students comprise about one-fourth of the overall NMC student population, according to Ms. Calixterio.

House wants govt buildings metered

The House of Representatives is requesting the Commonwealth Utilities Corporation to urgently install utility meters on all public offices, and do away with the flat rate charges currently imposed on the government for its power and water consumption. The House, expressing its preference for metered government offices, is convinced that the scheme would promote conservation of resources and lessen the government's deficit. Floor Leader Jesus T. Attao penned a resolution formalizing the request for the installation of utility meters, which the House adopted Wednesday. Attao underscored that part of the government's fiscal year 2002 deficit is attributed to the cost of government utilities consumption.

MHS students raise funds for Japan trip

With more than 10 weeks left before the Japan Cultural Exchange Program, 15 members of the Japan Club of the Marianas High School have launched efforts to raise an estimated $13,000 for the scheduled trip in 2003. Club members began their weekly fundraising program at the Civic Center Pavilion Saturday to raise the needed amount that would take them to the much-awaited ski trip to Tokyo and Hokkaido, Japan, an exchange program expected to be joined by at least 13 MHS students. According to Japan Club adviser Maria Salas, the students hoped to generate the necessary money by selling baked goodies at the pavilion in the next few weeks. The students started their fundraising drive yesterday.

'Education has bright economic promise'

Gov. Juan N. Babauta is pleased with the Bank of Hawaii economic assessment report, which described higher education as a potential new industry that could rake in money for the Commonwealth. Babauta described the report by Wali Osman, PhD., BoH's Senior Fellow for the Pacific Economies at the East West Center, as an "excellent report," noting its recognition of the Pacific Gateway project as potential starting point for a new industry. "It institutionalizes the idea of the education industry," Babauta said. Osman had stated in the report that Saipan could become the educational center of the East Asian region. Pacific Gateway is a multi-million-dollar project by the Northern Marianas College geared towards attracting foreign students into the CNMI.

BoR approves pay hike for instructors

The Northern Marianas College Board of Regents approved Friday a $150 across-the-board pay increase for faculty beginning spring 2004. The board said the increase is consistent with the goal of a 1999 pay hike resolution, which has not been implemented-until next year. After a lengthy board discussion, which was attended by over 20 faculty members, the board decided against delaying the approval of the motion for its next meeting as proposed by some members and the management. In the end, the board ruled to go ahead with the implementation of the 1999 resolution (pay increase) on the condition that the increment would be limited to adjunct faculty and some full-time instructors who teach extra courses.

PRELIMINARY ENGINEERING DESIGN FOR ROUTE 11 IMPROVEMENTS, Phase II, ROTA, Project No. CM-NH-0011(002)

Governor Benigno R. Fitial and Lt. Governor Eloy S. Inos, through the Department of Public Works (DPW), are soliciting sealed proposals for the Preliminary Engineering Design for Route 11 Improvements, Phase II, on Rota, Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands.

This procurement is made in accordance with the CNMI Procurement Regulations, dated May 24, 2001, however, Article 7, "Local Business Preference", as amended by Public Law 15-95 and as further amended by Public Law 15-118, is not available because its use is prohibited by Federal Law granting the funding for this project. A lot of people? Yes. Apocalypse? No

By DAVID LAM
LOS ANGELES TIMES

The United Nations has identified Monday as the day world population hit 7 billion. Many found the Halloween date appropriate given the frightening prospect of this demographic milestone. As if 7 billion weren't scary enough, the U.N. projects 10 billion people by 2083, the addition of roughly three more Indias.

But the parents of the 7-billionth person should not be afraid for their child's future. In spite of the daunting challenges facing the world, including global warming, rising food prices and a billion people in poverty, the 7-billionth child will almost surely have a better life than the 3-billionth or 6-billionth child.

How will the world cope with this many people? Consider what the world looked like in 1960, when the population hit 3 billion. Falling infant and child mortality caused population growth rates to surpass 2 percent per year in the 1960s, probably for the first time in history. At 2 percent growth, the world would double in 35 years, and that is roughly what happened—world population grew to 6 billion in 1999. World population will not come close to doubling again in 39 years. Indeed, it may never double again. Fertility has fallen rapidly, with many developing countries at or near the replacement fertility rate of 2.1. The world's population growth rate has been falling since its peak in the 1960s, and we may never get much above the 10.1 billion people projected for 2100.

So we've just been through the fastest population growth the world will ever see. It's a good time to look back and see how the world survived it.

There were gloomy predictions in the 1960s about the consequences of rapid population growth, the most famous appearing in Paul Ehrlich's 1968 book, "The Population Bomb." He wrote that "the battle to feed humanity is already lost, in the sense that we will not be able to prevent large-scale famines in the next decade."

Happily, Ehrlich was wrong. World food production grew faster than population during the last 50 years. Food production per person in 2009 was 41 percent higher than in 1961.

No country generated more fear about overpopulation than India. But food production there has grown faster than population since the Green Revolution of the late 1960s. Food production per person in India today is 37 percent higher than in 1961, although there are 2.6 times more people.

Although there are still serious problems with food distribution and malnutrition, we have done remarkably well at feeding the extra 4 billion people added since 1960. This should make us optimistic

A presidential cast of comics, magicians and a burlesque act

Let me set the scene:
It's a few weeks ago in a scroungy backstage dressing room, and all the Republican presidential hopefuls are there.

But rather than preparing to go onstage in front of television cameras for another debate, they are getting ready to perform their acts for a restless, rowdy audience gathered for a raunchy burlesque show.

The newcomer is Gov. Rick Perry, who has faltered in previous appearances and can't seem to get his act together. The experienced bump-and-grinders decide to give the new kid a few pointers.

Herman Cain, the ever-loving crowd pleaser with the most musical talent, then bursts into song:

"You can pull all the stops out
"Till they call the cops out,
"Grind your behind till you're banned,
"But you gotta get a gimmick
"If you want to get a hand."

A few others—Mitt Romney, Michele Bachmann, Ron Paul and Newt Gingrich—take turns urging Perry to revolutionize his dance and quickly get a gimmick "if you want to have a chance."

Many of you recognize those bawdy lyrics from the 1960s-era musical, "Gypsy," based on the life of famed striptease artist Gypsy Rose Lee.

The above scene came to mind last week as Perry teased America with a promised revelation of a new flat tax plan. After all, master dancer Cain's "9-9-9" gimmick seemed to be working for him.

By the time the governor got around to revealing his "optional" tax proposal, however, the burlesque audience that was expecting to see a little more flesh was disappointed as the act fell as flat as a web-footed performer singing off-key.

So, like the troupier he has proved to be, Perry began refining his act, calling in more coaches to help and vowing to put in more rehearsal time.

That flat tax plan is a bad idea, just as it was when Perry supporter (and now mentor) Steve Forbes touted it in his presidential bids of 1996 and 2000. Except Perry's proposal is worse. It does not eliminate the current tax code; instead, he wants to give taxpayers a choice between it and his flat 20 percent rate, with certain exceptions. Not to mention it would never raise sufficient revenue.

But it is a gimmick, one that resonates with some supporters. I would not be surprised if some form of it ended up in the Republican platform next year even if Perry is not the nominee.

I don't want to pick on just the governor. Politics overall is a touring company of gimmicks, flashy production numbers with a little sleight of hand or fancy footwork thrown in.

They all do it. Romney's role of "staying above the fray" is not playing to great applause, but it keeps him on the stage. Gingrich displays a know-it-all attitude, condescending demeanor and a gift of gab that suits his lame-scripted "Contract with America." Paul touts his Libertarian "no-big-government" mantra while providing comic relief, and Bachmann, a Sarah Palin understudy, continues to wave her staunch conservative values along with her flag and Bible.

President Barack Obama also has a bag of tricks. It just so happens that because of his position, he's already escaped burlesque and made it to Broadway.

As the old folks used to say, he's selling tickets; the only question is, "To what show?"

I'd like to hope that as the campaign heads into the early primaries—and they'll be earlier than usual next year—we could get past the showmanship and get to some real substance.

This is a crucial time for the country, so we don't need circus acts, fan dancers or magicians pulling rabbits out of hats. We need serious discussions of the issues, realistic recommendations for solutions and a public that will demand a presidential campaign that rises above superficiality and the gutter.

In the meantime, please cue songman Herman Cain for the final words:

"You can sacrifice your sacro
"Working in the back row,
"Bump in a dump till you're dead!
"Kid, you gotta get a gimmick
"If you want to get ahead."

Letters to the EditorUnanswered questions

Has anyone thought through what the consequences would be if all foreign workers without USCIS-approved status actually left island by No. 27, 2011—as they are being told they should? What if, after that date, a new business—a store or restaurant—wanted to open? What if, after that date, a businessman decided to add a new service and needed more workers? What if, after that date, a school found itself short of teachers and needed two more? An employee decided to get married, and be a stay-at-home rather than continue working? Someone had a stroke, and needed a caregiver? A contractor found he needed more construction workers? Someone got tired of trying to keep his/her own books and wanted to hire an accountant? Where would they find the needed worker(s)?

Theoretically, after that date those employers could hire a local resident, or someone from FSM, Marshalls, or Palau. But what if that didn't work? What if none of them qualified for the positions?

If all the foreign workers who did not have an approved status left island by Nov. 27, 2011, the amorphous multi-faceted labor pool that is now available in the CNMI would no longer exist. It will have disappeared—because the USCIS rules say that anyone other than local residents, those from the FSM, the Marshalls or Palau, who does not have a legitimate “status”—and that means a job, or parole—is not eligible to remain on island. (Foreign workers who are spouses of legitimate residents may stay, but they are not, per se, eligible for so-called CW-1 status, which would enable them to work.)

One would have to find a recruiting agency and start the lengthy, laborious—and costly—process of trying to hire someone, sight unseen, from elsewhere—presumably the Philippines. Has anyone thought through what that means? Not only to local businesses but, even more importantly, perhaps to new businesses interested in establishing themselves in the CNMI? Would anyone even be willing to start a new business here, if s/he was not able to interview applicants here, in person?

It is true that the USCIS has said that it will not immediately deport everyone who is not working and does not have the “right” paperwork. There is something called the “Morton memo,” which says the USCIS will give priority to deporting “undesirables” instead. There is also the reassurance from former Immigration and Naturalization general attorney Loida N. Lewis that no one can be deported without the due process of a legal hearing. And the reassurance from other off-island immigration lawyers that such workers have “numerous legal relief available to them”—lawyers, it should be noted, that may be experts in their field but may not be all that familiar with the provisions of the CNRA and immigration law as it applies to the CNMI.

With that encouragement, maybe not all foreign workers without jobs, without legal status, will leave the CNMI. But those that stay would still face the risk that when their turn came for a legal hearing, they would be told that because they have overstayed beyond the limits of their previous permits, they would be barred from returning to any U.S. soil for years. There is some hope that Kilili's House bill, H.R. 1466, may eventually pass the U.S. Congress and give status to some long-term workers. Those, perhaps, can justify their staying on despite the expiration of their permits. But what about the many others not covered by this bill? What can they offer as justification for ignoring the deadlines? Some of them will no doubt stay as well, just hoping. But it's a terrible position to put them in. And, technically speaking, couldn't those who hire these workers be themselves found guilty of conspiring to break the law?

The simplest way to ensure that the necessary labor pool continues to be available to all who may need workers from here on out would be to allow workers already here to remain here. That, of course, brings up the concern that if such workers are jobless, they would become a drain on the social services the CNMI provides to those in need. But in general, foreign workers who have been on island for many years have developed their own support systems, their own infrastructure of help and support. There are not all that many to begin with, and if they were allowed to stay and work, there wouldn't be that many without jobs of one sort or another in any case.

The CNMI's need for foreign workers is real. There simply are not enough warm bodies to fill all the positions available. Moreover, some of the warm bodies are not willing to take on some of those positions; others lack the skills, the training, the expertise. Hence the need for a supplementary work force. The current USCIS regulations do not accommodate this situation. They do not take into consideration the simple math involved. Nor are they at all flexible. Once every foreign worker on island has an approved status, USCIS seems to believe the “problem” will be cured. The regulations contain no provisions for changes in circumstances.

The USCIS does not have the authority, under the CNRA, to provide for improved status for foreign workers. It can only deal providing a guest worker in the Commonwealth with lawful nonimmigrant status during the “transition period.” It will take an act of the U.S. Congress to properly solve the CNMI's problem.

In the meantime, perhaps the USCIS should postpone—for at least six months—the effective date of its new regulations until more of the wrinkles get ironed out. Or lift some of the restrictions on who may work and under what conditions. Or broaden who is eligible for parole. Or...? Right now, its staff is so beleaguered that one cannot even get an InfoPass—the only way available to talk to USCIS personnel on island.

Participate in casino survey

To all government employees, retirees, surviving spouse, and unemployed citizens of Saipan: The CNMI government is broke, the retirement program is in the intensive care unit, and the economy is at its worst.

I would like to ask all who will be affected to come out and cast your vote on Friday, Nov. 4, 2011, at the following locations: NMC building “D,” the multi-purpose building, the Legislature building, and the Kagman Community Center, to show your support and concerns about the affected programs above. The survey is to hear your sentiment whether we need casinos to revive our economy or not. As your public servant, we strive to bring in fresh money into the CNMI. The casino industry in the Asian market is blooming and we strongly believe that it will help our ailing economy.

Please go to the locations listed above and participate in the survey. Your future is in your hands. Thank you and may God continue to bless us all as we strive to make our Islands prosperous and safe.

Apology

Dear people of the CNMI and CUC: I am writing this letter to ask you, the people of CNMI, to forgive me for my mistake. I tampered with a CUC meter to gain a benefit for myself and not pay my bills like everybody else. I realize and understand that what I have done is wrong and it brought shame to myself and my family. I didn't really mean to do this but I was so desperate when I was a jobless from 2006 to 2010, and now my mistake has been very hard and difficult for my life. I am serving my seven years of probation and paying all my penalties. I am currently serving time on probation for the mistake that I have done to CUC. Now that I have a job, I promise to keep my job and to respect other property and I want to move on with my life and start all over again. I feel shame and I regret what I did and am asking you again to please forgive me. Thank you very much for your time and understanding and I promise this will never happen again.

A lesson in history

To those not aware and totally unfamiliar with what took place before the making and signing of our unique Covenant with the United States, there is a huge difference between demanding and using false humanitarian issues as a reason for one's agenda. In 1986, we the people of the Commonwealth woke up as American citizens. Yes, I woke up an American and proud of it. How it happened is really simple: 78.8 percent of our people including my parents, grandparents, uncles, and aunties voted “yes” to becoming a member of the American family, a destiny that would forever change our future. Our people did not demand, protest, hold vigils, and so forth. Instead we were afforded the opportunity to choose. A “yes” or “no” answer was all it took. Through negotiations after negotiations between our government and the United States, we became what we are today, American citizens. Look it up, it's in the books.

To my detractors

When I grow up, I just want to be like those people who write negative comments in our local newspapers. Reading your comments only makes me stronger. It shows that even if my stuff is not worthy, you read it anyway. Gotcha! I want to be like Mitch Westland (if that's your real name) if I grow up. I do hope one day I would be a student in your class, that is, if teaching's your profession. What's the matter? The U.S. is too good for you, that's why you're here? I admit though, that I rushed my article without proofreading but never have I used a ghostwriter or asked anyone for assistance for that matter. And at times I do forget to put the “i's” before the “e's.” At least I have the marbles to express my thoughts without using a fictitious name. That's if you are using one, are you? Commenting on every news article rather than sharing ideas to move the Commonwealth forward is useless, if not pointless, if you don't put your teaching credentials to good use. Just a friendly advice. Anyway, I got my point across, whether you like it or not and that's the bottom line. I thank you for taking the time to grade me and allowing me to take corrective measures in the future. Just one of those local boys with limited talents. Mr. Westland, can you grade this article or anyone else's writing? Again, thanks for your constructive criticism and perhaps someday I could bring my writings to your attention for some editing. Over coffee of course!

about feeding the 3 billion more to be added in the next 70 years.

Increased food supply is one reason that children around the world today are the healthiest ever born. An Indian baby born in 2011 has almost double the probability of surviving the first year of life as a baby born in 1960.

The 7-billionth child will also be better educated than a child born in 1960. Big increases in education in the developing world are one of the most impressive accomplishments of the last 50 years, especially given unprecedented growth of school-age populations. Only about one-third of Indian girls born in 1960 completed primary school, compared with about three-fourths of those born in 1990. For an Indian girl born in 2011 the rate will be even higher.

The probability that a child will grow up in poverty has been going down. For developing countries as a whole, the percentage living below the World Bank's $1.25-per-day poverty line fell from 50 percent in 1981 to 25 percent in 2005. India's poverty rate fell from 60 percent in 1981 to 42 percent in 2005 and can be expected to keep falling.

Not all countries have done as well as India. But even in sub-Saharan Africa, the region with the poorest economic performance, poverty rates have fallen, education has increased and food production per person has been rising (albeit slowly) since the 1980s.

None of this is meant to deny the enormous challenges we face. We survived the population bomb through hard work and creativity, and we will need more of it to continue to feed the world and reduce poverty. But the remarkable experience of the last 50 years teaches us that we should not be afraid to celebrate the birth of the 7-billionth child.

TSL Foundation offers 5 scholarship slots for NMC students

The Tan Siu Lin Foundation will be providing scholarships to 10 students of the Northern Marianas College as part ongoing efforts to promote higher education among CNMI students.

The Tan Siu Lin Foundation Scholarship program will provide $1,000 per scholarship recipient that can be applied for the spring and/or summer 2012 semesters. The scholarships will be awarded to five full-time students pursuing an associate in Applied Science degree in Hospitality Management, and five full-time students pursuing other degrees at NMC. In addition to hospitality management, the college offers degrees in business, liberal arts, nursing, natural resources management, criminal justice, and education.

"The scholarship is aimed at helping students in the CNMI pursue their education at the Northern Marianas College," said TSL Foundation president and chief of operations Jerry Tan. "We need to continue building our local workforce with skilled and knowledgeable individuals and this scholarship is one of the ways the Tan Siu Lin Foundation is advancing that objective."

The Tan Holdings Foundation was formed in 2002 and was renamed after the company's founder and chairman, Dr. Tan Siu Lin. Through the years, the Tan Siu Lin Foundation has launched initiatives and built trusted partnerships with a diverse array of individuals, families, corporations, nonprofit organizations, and government agencies. These partners represent many different backgrounds and income levels. The main mission of the organization is to better serve the regions in which they operate thus making the communities a better place to live in.

"The Tan Siu Lin Foundation has been a strong supporter of the Northern Marianas College for many years," said acting NMC president Galvin Deleon Guerrero. "This scholarship program goes a long way in helping our students reach their educational and professional goals."

The scholarships are based on merit and will be awarded to the recipient on the basis of the candidate's community involvement, academic background, and letters of recommendation. The essay and interview will also play a key role in the final selection of scholarship recipients.

The deadline for submitting applications for the Tan Siu Lin

Foundation Scholarship is Nov. 30, 2011. Applications and additional information will be available for download on www.nm-cnet.edu, or by contacting the NMC Financial Aid Office at 234-5498 Ext. 1527. (NMC)

Medicare Part D for the man'amko

Many man'amko are feeling the pressure of a tight economy but there is good news. It is now open enrollment for Medicare Part D prescription drug coverage. Part D is available for those man'amko who have active Medicare Part A and B coverage. Medicare Part A covers hospitalization and Part B covers physician visits.

"We're happy to announce that, to date, 14 of our man'amko have been successfully enrolled into AARP Medicare Part D for prescription drug coverage, and more enrollments are expected to be completed within the next week," said Raena Celis, Brabu Pharmacy's customer service specialist. "We've helped almost 30 people complete the enrollment application so far. We hope to help more before enrollment ends on Dec. 7."

"Part D coverage for new enrollees will begin Jan. 1, 2012. The premium for most applicants will be $17.10 per month, for those older than 65 years of age and just joining, it may cost a bit more," explained Ted Parker, Brabu Pharmacy co-owner.

"We want to assist our patients to enroll because many have told us their problems with trying to call a Medicare representative or trying to enroll online. Some simply gave up."

Man'amko wishing to enroll in AARP Medicare Part D are invited to visit Brabu Pharmacy and Wellness Center, open Monday through Friday 9am to 6pm, and on Saturdays, from 9am to 1pm. The enrollment process is free and takes only a few minutes.

"It's well worth your time if you would like to lower your co-pay for prescription drugs," said Parker. "People taking generic drugs for diabetes or high blood pressure maintenance can expect their co-pays to lower to $6 for a 30-day supply, or go down to zero if they have dual insurances."

If you would like to learn more, Brabu Pharmacy invites you to call 233-AMOT (2668), or stop by their store in Gualo Rai. "We're here to help. Brabu is committed to helping the community's total wellbeing." (Brabu)

Nomination open for ESGR's 2012 Employer Support Freedom Award

» Guard and Reserve members encouraged to nominate supportive employers

ARLINGTON, Va.—Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve, or ESGR, a Department of Defense agency, is now accepting nominations for the 2012 Secretary of Defense Employer Support Freedom Award. The Freedom Award is the DoD's highest award for civilian employers supporting Guard and Reserve members.

The DoD encourages all Guard and Reserve members to nominate employers who have provided exceptional support of their military service. Nominations may be submitted by service members, or a family member acting on their behalf, at www.FreedomAward.mil through January 16, 2012.

"Employers who go above and beyond in their support of Guard and Reserve members are providing a tremendous service to our country; they are contributing to the resiliency and peace of mind of the more than one million men and women who stand ready to serve when our nation's calls on them," said David McGinnis, acting Assistant Secretary of Defense for Reserve Affairs. "Guard and Reserve members who feel their employers have gone the extra mile in supporting their military service should nominate them for the 2012 Secretary of Defense Employer Support Freedom Award to show their appreciation and highlight their support as an example for others to follow."

With employer support acknowledged as a critical component of our national defense, ESGR enhanced the nomination website this year to help guide nominators in capturing the most important details of their employers' support. Previous recipients garnered recognition for supportive measures including organizing colleagues to provide dinners to a deployed employee's family, covering extra shifts during an employee's military training, taking a deployed service member's children to sports practices and other family events, and establishing robust military support networks.

There were 19 nominations on Guam and in the CNMI last year. Three local employers, Galaide Group, LLC, Hilton Guam Resort and Spa and the CNMI Public School System were named as Semifinalists, or Top 148 of the over 4,049 nominations nationwide.

The Top Fifteen Employers of 2012 will be announced by early summer and honored in Washington, D.C. during a special ceremony early next fall.

The Freedom Award was instituted in 1996 under the auspices of ESGR to recognize exceptional support from the employer community. In the years since, 160 employers have been honored with the award.

For questions regarding the Freedom Award, visit www.FreedomAward.mil or contact Capt. Josephine Blas at (671) 735-0456 in Guam or Janice Tenorio at (670) 483-6309 in the CNMI. (ESGR)

Pacific countries to benefit from coconut processing manual

SUVA, Fiji—A new coconut processing manual published by the Secretariat of the Pacific Community will assist community-based producers in the Pacific to improve the quality of their value-added coconut products to meet international market requirements.

The Processing Manual for Virgin Coconut Oil, its Products and By-products for Pacific Island Countries and Territories by Divina D. Bawalan was launched earlier this week at a meeting for Pacific agricultural stakeholders in Nadi, Fiji.

The production and printing of the manual was made possible through the support of the European Union.

Launching the manual, Vinay Chand, a leading United Kingdom-based consultant on coconut processing and marketing said, "This manual is intended as a primary source of practical knowledge on the proper handling and processing of fresh coconuts to ensure that virgin coconut oil (VCO) and its by-products will be produced to meet and possibly exceed international standards."

Virgin coconut oil from the Pacific is being exported to Europe, Australia, New Zealand and United States markets.

"One of the concerns with producing VCO on a home, micro and village scale operation (especially for home consumption and domestic markets) is achieving a product with consistently good quality that will meet international standards and will always be fit for human consumption," said Chand.

"It is envisioned that the manual will lead to a better understanding of coconut oil and its quality parameters so that VCO processors can easily respond to the queries of their buyers," he added.

The purest form of coconut oil, VCO has been generating a lot of interest in coconut-producing countries as well as importing nations because of its multi-functional uses and the way it can be produced at different production levels. VCO production offers an opportunity for the Pacific region's coconut farmers to increase their income with this alternative to low value copra production.

Aside from presenting VCO processing technologies specifically suited to Pacific Island countries and territories, or PICTs, the manual covers options for the processing of coconut shell, water from mature coconuts and coconut milk residue, which are by-products of VCO processing.

It also includes the processing of VCO-based downstream products such as herbal soap, aromatherapy oils and herbal lotions, using aromatic plants available in the Pacific.

The manual is a more focused version of the Virgin coconut oil production manual for micro and village scale processing published by the Food and Agriculture Organization Regional Office for Asia and the Pacific in 2006. It was co-authored by Divina D. Bawalan, previously a senior science research specialist with the Philippine Coconut Authority, and Keith R. Chapman, formerly an industrial crops officer at FAO's Asia-Pacific office.

In the course of conducting VCO training courses in PICTs since 2006, Bawalan discovered that one of the simplest micro/home scale VCO processing technologies that was developed in the Philippines and documented in the FAO VCO manual does not actually work well in the Pacific region. This may be due to the differences in coconut variety, coconut harvesting procedures, and other factors.

As a result, for every training course conducted by Bawalan in a Pacific country, modifications to the process were made, adapting it to the particular conditions of each country.

In 2009, a roundtable meeting held in Nadi, Fiji discussed the state of the art of coconut processing and market prospects of coconut products in Pacific countries. Organized by SPC and the Asian and Pacific Coconut Community, the meeting highlighted the need for PICTs to focus on the production of high value coconut products.

Consequently, SPC's Land Resources Division, which is mandated to improve the food and nutritional security of the Pacific community, arranged for Bawalan to adapt her 2006 manual to Pacific conditions through its European Union-funded Facilitating Agricultural Trade project. Copies of the book are available through the European Union-funded Facilitating Agricultural Commodity Trade project, based in the Land Resources Division of SPC. Electronic editions can be downloaded at www.spc.int/lrd. (SPC)

Greece's Papandreou toughs out pledge for a referendum

ATHENS, Greece (AP)—Greece's prime minister held firm early Wednesday to his shock decision to call for a referendum on a hard-fought European debt deal, despite anger from abroad, market turmoil across the world and dissent from within his own party.

George Papandreou's government still faced a battle for survival, with a vote of confidence scheduled for Friday and a grilling from frustrated European leaders expected later in the day ahead of the Group of 20 summit in the French Riviera.

After a grueling seven-hour Cabinet meeting that finished after 3 a.m. (0100GMT), government spokesman Ilias Mosialos said Papandreou's ministers expressed "total support for the initiatives taken by the prime minister." He said the referendum would be held "as soon as possible."

However, government officials said two ministers still had strong reservations with the idea of a referendum, which will be the first in Greece since the country voted to abolish the monarchy in 1974. The officials spoke on condition of anonymity to reveal details of the Cabinet meeting.

Papandreou told his ministers that putting the issue to the Greek people was the only way to safeguard the European deal.

"We will not implement any program by force, but only with the consent of the Greek people," he said. "This is our democratic tradition and we demand that it is also respected abroad."

A referendum, he said, "will be a clear mandate, and a clear message within and outside of Greece, about our European course and our participation in the euro," he said, according to a text of his speech to the meeting issued by his office.

"The dilemma is not 'this government or another one', the dilemma is 'yes or no to the agreement', 'yes or no to Europe', 'yes or no to the euro,'" he said.

World markets were hammered after Papandreou's surprise Monday night announcement amid fears the vote could unravel a deal which took European leaders months of complex negotiations among themselves and with banks to reach.

Greece's general price index plunged to close down 6.92 percent, while in Germany the Dax index, the major stock market average, lost 5 percent - the equivalent of about 600 points on the Dow. The French stock market closed down 5.4 percent, the Italian 6.7 percent and London 2.2 percent. The Dow Jones industrial average finished down nearly 300 points, or 2.5 percent.

European leaders made no secret of their displeasure.

"This announcement surprised all of Europe," said a clearly annoyed French President Nicolas Sarkozy, who has been scrambling to save face for Europe before he hosts leaders of the G20 major world economies beginning Thursday.

"Giving the people a say is always legitimate, but the solidarity of all countries of the eurozone cannot work unless each one consents to the necessary efforts," he said.

Bank of America backs down on $5 debit card fee

Bank of America Corp. is scrapping its plan to charge a $5 monthly fee for debit card purchases after outraged customers threatened an exodus.

The about-face comes as customers across the country petitioned the bank and mobilized to close their accounts in favor of credit unions and community banks. The outcry prompted other major banks, including JP-Morgan Chase & Co. and Wells Fargo & Co., to cancel trial tests of their own debit card fees.

Bank of America, the nation's second largest bank, said it reversed course after listening to customers. Anne Pace, a spokeswoman for Bank of America, declined to say whether there was a spike in account closures following the September announcement that it would start charging the fee early next year.

Higher fees have become a fact of life for bank customers in recent years. But this one touched a nerve because it hit so close to home; many Americans have come to rely on debit cards to manage essential expenses such as groceries and gas.

At the same time, there's still lingering resentment over the role that banks played in the 2008 financial meltdown and the ongoing home foreclosure crisis. That anger has come to surface in recent weeks with the Occupy Wall Street movement. (AP)

Draft report: The future holds more extreme weather

WASHINGTON (AP)—For a world already weary of weather catastrophes, the latest warning from top climate scientists paints a grim future: More floods, more heat waves, more droughts and greater costs to deal with them.

A draft summary of an international scientific report obtained by The Associated Press says the extremes caused by global warming could eventually grow so severe that some locations become “increasingly marginal as places to live.”

The report from the Nobel Prize-winning Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change marks a change in climate science, from focusing on subtle shifts in average temperatures to concentrating on the harder-to-analyze freak events that grab headlines, hurt economies and kill people.

“The extremes are a really noticeable aspect of climate change,” said Jerry Meehl, senior scientist at the National Center for Atmospheric Research. “I think people realize that the extremes are where we are going to see a lot of the impacts of climate change.”

The final version of the report from a panel of leading climate scientists will be issued in a few weeks, after a meeting in Uganda. The draft says there is at least a 2-in-3 probability that climate extremes have already worsened because of man-made greenhouse gases.

The most recent bizarre weather extreme, the pre-Halloween snowstorm that crippled parts of the Northeast last weekend, cannot be blamed on climate change and probably isn’t the type of storm that will increase with global warming, according to four meteorologists and climate scientists.

Experts on extreme storms have focused more closely on the increasing number of super-heavy rainstorms, not snow, NASA climate scientist Gavin Schmidt said.

By the end of the century, the intense, single-day rainstorms that typically happen once every 20 years will probably happen about twice a decade, the report said.

The opposite type of disaster—a drought such as the stubbornly long dry spell gripping Texas and parts of the Southwest—could also happen more often as the world warms, said Schmidt and Meehl, who reviewed part of the climate panel report.

Studies have not yet specifically tied global warming to the continuing drought, but it is consistent with computer models that indicate current climate trends will worsen existing droughts, Meehl said.

Scientifically connecting a weather disaster with global warming is a complicated and time-consuming task that can take more than a year and involve lots of computer calculations.

Researchers have also predicted more intense monsoons with climate change. Warmer air can hold more water and impart more energy to weather systems, changing the dynamics of storms and where and how they hit.

Thailand is now coping with massive flooding from monsoonal rains—an event that illustrates how climate is also connected with other manmade issues such as population growth, urban development and river management, Schmidt said.

In fact, the report says, “for some climate extremes in many regions, the main driver for future increases in losses will be socioeconomic” rather than a result of greenhouse gases.

The panel was formed by the United Nations and World Meteorological Organization. In the past, it has discussed extreme events in snippets in its report.

But this time, the scientists are putting them all together.

The report, which needs approval by diplomats at the mid-November meeting, tries to measure the confidence scientists have in their assessment of climate extremes both future and past.

Chris Field, one of the leaders of the climate change panel, said he and other authors declined to comment because the report is still subject to change.

The summary chapter did not detail which regions of the world might suffer extremes so severe as to leave them only marginally habitable.

The report does say scientists are “virtually certain”—99 percent—that the world will have more extreme spells of heat and fewer of cold. Heat waves could peak as much as 5 degrees hotter by mid-century and even 9 degrees hotter by the end of the century.

From June to August this year in the United States, blistering heat set 2,703 daily high temperature records, compared with only 300 cold records during that period. That made it the hottest summer in the U.S. since the Dust Bowl of 1936, according to Weather Underground Meteorology Director Jeff Masters, who was not involved in the study.

New Libyan PM was Alabama professor for 20 years

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP)—For 20 years, Abdurrahim el-Keib taught electrical engineering at the University of Alabama, helped lead the area’s Muslim community and talked little about his home country of Libya. With Moammar Gadhafi’s regime deposed, the professor now has a new role as prime minister of his homeland.

El-Keib was elected to the post late Monday by Libya’s National Transitional Council and will replace outgoing interim Prime Minister Mahmoud Jibril, who had promised to step down after victory over Gadhafi’s dictatorship. His selection suggests the country’s interim rulers may be seeking out a government leader palatable both to the West and to Libyans who distrust anyone connected to the former regime.

El-Keib holds a doctorate in electrical engineering from North Carolina State University, where he also taught, and moved to Alabama in 1985, according to a biography posted by a former employer, the Petroleum Institute in the United Arab Emirates.

Online documents show el-Keib was at the University of Alabama for 20 years, becoming involved with the Faculty Senate and serving as a speaker representing Muslims to other faith communities in the city after the 9/11 terror attacks on New York and Washington.

The professor spoke at a Christian church in Tuscaloosa about the beliefs of Muslims in January 2002, and longtime friend Mirza Beg said el-Keib helped raise money for a new Islamic center that opened in Tuscaloosa more than a decade ago, near the university’s football stadium.

Family: Hillary Clinton’s mother dies at 92

WASHINGTON (AP)—Dorothy Rodham, mother of Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton and former President Bill Clinton’s mother-in-law, died Tuesday at age 92 after an illness.

Rodham

The family said Rodham died shortly after midnight, surrounded by her family at a Washington hospital. The secretary of state had cancelled a planned trip to London and Istanbul to be at her mother’s side.

In a statement, the Clinton family hailed Rodham as a woman who “overcame abandonment and hardship as a young girl to become the remarkable woman she was—a warm, generous and strong woman; an intellectual; a woman who told a great joke and always got the joke; an extraordinary friend and, most of all, a loving wife, mother and grandmother.”

President Barack Obama praised Rodham as a “remarkable person” who also was “strong, determined and gifted.”

“For her to have been able to live the life that she did and to see her daughter succeed at the pinnacle of public service in this country I’m sure was deeply satisfying to her,” Obama said after signing an executive order in the Oval Office. “My thoughts, Michelle’s thoughts, the entire White House’s thoughts go out to the entire Clinton family. I know that she will be remembered as somebody who helped make a difference in this country and this world.”

Surgeons separate California conjoined twins

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP)—Twin two-year-old girls who were joined at the chest and abdomen were separated Tuesday during a lengthy, complex procedure at Stanford University’s children’s hospital. Sisters Angelina and Angelica Sabuco were undergoing an expected nine hours of surgery by a team of more than 20 doctors and nurses to gain their independence. By mid-afternoon, hospital spokeswoman Reena Mukamal announced the girls had been separated and moved to their own operating rooms for the second phase of surgery—reconstructing the area where they were connected. Mukamal said doctors were pleased with the progress of the operation so far at Lucile Packard Children’s Hospital in Palo Alto.

Inmates freed after crack penalties are eased

WASHINGTON (AP)—Thousands of inmates are being released early from federal prison because of an easing of the harsh penalties for crack that were enacted in the 1980s, when the drug was a terrifying new phenomenon in America’s cities.

Penalties for crack were reduced to bring them more in line with those for powder, and Tuesday was the first day inmates locked up under the old rules could get out early. Some 12,000 prisoners are expected to benefit from reduced sentences over the next several years, with an estimated 1,900 eligible for immediate release as of Tuesday.

Cain struggles to contain allegations fallout

WASHINGTON (AP)—Republican presidential candidate Herman Cain denied on Tuesday that he’s changing his story as he struggles to contain the fallout from sexual harassment allegations that could threaten his recently surging campaign. He also suggested his race could be a factor in the storm. The White House contender’s contradictory explanations over two days have raised questions about details of the allegations from back in the 1990s and about his current ability to manage a crisis in the national spotlight. The accusations, relating to his time as head of the National Restaurant Association, have surfaced just as he’s risen in national polls in the GOP nomination fight two months before the leadoff Iowa caucuses.

Bamboo building bonanza in Bali

BALI, Indonesia (AP)—Off Bali's beaten track, past a towering banyan tree and next to an ancient Hindu temple, the world's largest bamboo commercial structure is slowly taking shape: a chocolate factory.

The three-story, 23,000-square-foot building—made from more than 3,000 long, flexible poles—is crowned with a graceful, sloped ceiling nearly 50 feet high.

Frederick Schilling, co-owner of the Big Tree Farms factory, calls it his “bamboo cathedral.”

The tropical plant, favored in the West for flooring, furniture and household accessories, is increasingly being viewed as the construction material of choice from Africa to South America—and no longer just for shacks and scaffolding.

Bali is leading the charge, attracting carpenters, architects and designers from across the globe to use bamboo in building everything from a school and luxury villas to exclusive resorts.

The plant—found in almost every equatorial nation—can grow up to 4 feet in a single day, reaching the height of a giant oak in less than six months. Many species are strong enough to use in building in as little as five years.

Cheap, tough as concrete, with the ability to bend, and incredibly abundant, bamboo's possibilities are almost limitless.

“Bamboo is definitely regarded as one of the most sustainable building materials in the world,” said Schilling, whose factory is scheduled to start pumping out four to six varieties of rich organic chocolate bars in January.

“As a bonus, it's also very beautiful to work with.”

Bali's craze, bringing together entrepreneurial expats and local craftsmen, started six years ago with the founding of a local bamboo production company for the construction of Green School, an exclusive international school with 275 students.

Since then, more than a dozen projects have sprung up across the so-called “island of the Gods.”

Green Village, a collection of designer villas with individual price tags as high as $750,000, sits down the Ayung River from Green School. Fivelements, a holistic healing retreat, is just a few miles north.

“Bali is a microcosm,” said Ben Ripple, Schilling's partner and the founder of Big Tree Farms, which makes spices, salts and other artisanal products sold at gourmet food stores such as Dean & DeLuca.

“What you get is a situation where five years on Bali shows what happens over a 20-year-plus period in other more developed areas.”

STRANDED

In this Wednesday, Nov. 2, 2011, photo provided by Maritime New Zealand, the cargo ship Rena lays stranded on a reef near Tauranga, New Zealand. Stranded for nearly a month now, the condition of the cargo ship has worsened and authorities say they are preparing for it to break apart. Salvage crews have been in a stop-start race to remove oil from Rena to prevent it from leaking into the ocean. Crews removed more than 1,100 tons of oil before bad weather halted efforts Sunday. About 385 tons remain on board—about the same amount that has leaked into the sea. The ship has been stranded since Oct. 5. The reef is about 14 miles from Tauranga Harbour on North Island.

Rural mothers-to-be in China lack syphilis testing

BEIJING (AP)—Nearly half of pregnant women do not get tested for syphilis in poor areas of southern China where the sexually transmitted disease has seen a resurgence, researchers said Wednesday. A study published in a World Health Organization journal found that more than 40 percent of about 125,000 mothers-to-be in Guangdong province were not tested for syphilis in 2008, mostly due to a lack of health facilities in rural areas. Syphilis is a bacterial infection that is easy to cure but can ravage the mind and kill if untreated. Pregnant women with syphilis can miscarry or the babies can be stillborn or have congenital defects.

Philippine govt, rebels in standoff over commander

MANILA, Philippines (AP)—The Philippine military says it will continue to hunt down a fugitive guerrilla commander accused of beheading marines after the country's largest Muslim rebel group vowed not to surrender him. The standoff over Moro Islamic Liberation Front commander Dan Laksaw Asnawi hangs over already shaky peace talks that are expected to resume Thursday in Malaysia. Military spokesman Col. Arnulfo Marcelo Burgos said Wednesday that law enforcement operations aimed at capturing Asnawi will continue but stressed that the rebel group was not the target. Asnawi escaped from jail in 2009. Nineteen troops were killed Oct. 18 in a failed attempt to arrest him. Rebel vice chairman Ghadzali Jaafar denies Asnawi's involvement in the 2007 beheadings.

New trouble reported at Japan nuclear plant

TOKYO (AP)—Officials at the tsunami-damaged Fukushima Dai-ichi nuclear power plant have detected a radioactive gas associated with fission that could indicate a problem at one of its reactors. They are injecting boric acid as a precautionary measure. Gas from inside the reactor indicated the presence of radioactive Xenon, which could be the byproduct of unexpected nuclear fission. The boric acid—used to control nuclear reactions—was being injected Tuesday through a cooling pipe as a countermeasure, although it was not clear if fission had occurred. The Tokyo Electric Power Co., or TEPCO, said there was no rise in the reactor's temperature, pressure or radiation levels.

Plane from US lands on its belly in Poland, none hurt

WARSAW, Poland (AP)—A Boeing airliner from the U.S. carrying 231 people was forced to land on its belly in Warsaw after its landing gear failed to open, triggering sparks and small fires. No one was hurt, but some passengers sobbed as they prayed for a safe landing.

Capt. Tadeusz Wrona, who handled the descent on Tuesday so smoothly that many on board thought the Boeing 767 had landed on its wheels, was instantly hailed as a hero in Poland and online, where within hours he was the focus of several Facebook fan pages.

The successful landing of the Polish LOT airlines flight, which was traveling from Newark, New Jersey, also was a huge relief for a country that has suffered multiple aviation disasters in recent years, including the April 2010 crash in Russia that killed President Lech Kaczynski and 95 others.

“I was praying for the pilot not to lose control because we started to make circles over the airport. It was terrible,” passenger Teresa Kowalik told reporters at the airport. “We owe everything to the pilot. He really did a great job.”

LOT said the plane suffered “a central hydraulic system failure,” indicating that the hydraulics used to extend the landing gear, or undercarriage, failed. The failure of an entire undercarriage was unprecedented for a Boeing 767 and highly unusual overall, according to aviation data and experts.

The pilots discovered there was a problem about half an hour after leaving Newark, said LOT president Marcin Pirog. They circled the plane above the airport for about one hour before descending, partly to keep trying to release the landing gear, and partly to use up fuel to lessen the risk of a blaze.

The pilot told passengers four hours into the flight that the plane faced technical problems, said a passenger who gave only her first name, Malgorzata.

“The pilot addressed us a number of times and said we should follow instructions. Later, a flight attendant said there might be a fire, and at that point people began to get nervous and uncertain,” she said.

“I started to cry, and the men around me were also crying,” said another passenger, Krystyna Dabrowska, 62. “I thought that was the end of me.”

Hand of Egypt's military rulers grows heavier

CAIRO (AP)—Growing in confidence after eight months in power, Egypt's military generals appear more determined than ever to crush the protest movement that ousted Hosni Mubarak and has turned critical of their rule.

This week, they detained Alaa Abdel-Fattah, a blogger whose activism made him an icon of the anti-Mubarak uprising, and—in an accusation that was derided by fellow activists—said he was to blame for stirring up violence at an October protest where 27 people were killed when soldiers cracked down.

At the same time, the military leadership has been drumming up an image of itself as the nation's foremost patriots, even as it steps up moves to silence critics, leaning on managers of media outlets to tone down commentary on the army or ban particularly vocal critics from appearing on political talk shows.

Activists worry the military aims to hold power for as long as possible to give itself time to create favorable conditions for one of its own or a civilian with military background to run for president in elections. In what many saw as a trial balloon, posters went up briefly last week in Cairo and the Mediterranean city of Alexandria voicing support for the head of the military, Field Marshal Hussein Tantawi, as a presidential candidate.

Tantawi and other generals on the ruling Supreme Council of the Armed Forces insist the military has no wish to stay in power and will not field a candidate in the presidential election, slated for late next year or early 2013. But activists doubt it will willingly give up the domination it has enjoyed over the nation for decades.

“I have serious doubts that the military will hand over power to civilians,” said activist Ahmed Imam. “They will most likely choreograph a scenario in which they will appear to hand over power but will in fact hold on to power.”

Global health fund probe uncovers $20M in losses

GENEVA (AP)—A global health fund investigating its own losses in grant money said Tuesday that 12 more probes had turned up an additional $20 million of mismanagement, alleged fraud and mispending.

The Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria posted the results—contained in three fraud probes, eight audits and an internal review of travel involving about $1 billion in grant money—on its website.

Earlier probes by the fund's internal watchdog, the inspector general's office, had detected about $53 million in losses, according to fund documents, some unpublished, provided by senior officials.

The fund's board chairman Simon Bland told The Associated Press it has now reviewed about one-seventh of $14 billion in grants disbursed but it would be misleading to extrapolate the percentage of corruption turning up in fund programs.

He said the fund, which has approved more than $22 billion in grants since its creation in 2002 as a major financing tool, is demanding repayment of the money—and two new cases in Nigeria and India could lead to criminal charges.

The fund says it has recovered $19 million in misspent or undocumented money so far.

“We think the Global Fund standards of accounting are really high,” Bland said. “We will not tolerate misuse of our resources.”

In Nigeria, the probe found $22 million in unauthorized foreign currency exchanges by a not-for-profit center in Abuja, that diverted hundreds of thousands of dollars to non-fund accounts. In India, at least $872,000 had been misappropriated, some transferred to a shell corporation and used to rent and renovate an official's home.

Deaths from painkiller overdose triple in decade

NEW YORK (AP)—The number of overdose deaths from powerful painkillers more than tripled over a decade, the government reported Tuesday—a trend that a U.S. health official called an epidemic, but one that can be stopped.

Prescription painkillers such as OxyContin, Vicodin and methadone led to the deaths of almost 15,000 people in 2008, including actor Heath Ledger. That's more than three times the 4,000 deaths from narcotics in 1999.

Such painkillers "are meant to help people who have severe pain," said Dr. Thomas Frieden, director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta, which issued the report. "They are, however, highly addictive."

The report shows nearly 5 percent of Americans ages 12 and older said they've abused painkillers in the past year—using them without a prescription or just for the high. In 2008-09 surveys, Oklahomans reported the highest rate of abuse; the lowest was in Nebraska and Iowa.

The overdose deaths reflect the spike in the number of narcotic painkillers prescribed every year—enough to give every American a one-month supply, Frieden said.

Prescriptions rose as doctors aimed to better treat pain and as new painkillers hit the market.

Frieden and White House drug czar Gil Kerlikowske, who joined him at CDC headquarters in Atlanta, said states need to take sharp actions to reverse the long-running trend.

States oversee prescription practices and can rigorously monitor prescriptions and crack down on "pill mills" and "doctor shopping" by patients, Frie-den said.

Doctors should limit prescriptions—giving only a three-day supply for acute pain, for example—and look for alternative treatments, he said.

"For chronic pain, narcotics should be the last resort," he added.

A federal drug plan announced this year calls for state programs to track prescriptions. All but two states—Missouri and New Hampshire—have ap-tion. Earlier this month, a doctor in Southern California was sentenced to prison for illegally selling tens of thousands of prescriptions for painkillers and sedative. Ohio now requires pain clinics to be licensed by the state, and limits the amount of pills that can be dispensed at clinics. Florida also has cracked down on so-called "pill mills."

Overall, there were 36,450 fatal overdoses in 2008, including the recent deaths of a 27-year-old model at the mansion of an Anheuser-Busch heir and of former hockey player Derek Boogaard.

Other findings of the CDC report:

■ New Mexico had the highest overdose death rate (27 per 100,000) and Nebraska had the lowest (5.5). The national rate was 11.9.

■ Fatal overdoses were more likely in men, middle-aged proved them, said Kerlikowske. But a number of states don't have them in place yet or doctors aren't using them enough to check on their patients' past prescriptions, he said.

America's prescription drug abuse epidemic is not a problem that's going to be solved overnight, but at the same time, we're not powerless.

"America's prescription drug abuse epidemic is not a problem that's going to be solved overnight, but at the same time, we're not powerless," said Kerlikowske, who urged parents to get rid of unneeded or expired painkillers so they aren't misused.

Some states are taking accidental cases and suicides involving illegal drugs like heroin and cocaine along with prescription medicines. About three-quarters of the deaths from prescriptions involved narcotic painkillers.

That's the year Ledger died from an accidental overdose of painkillers and sedatives. A few months later, a 12-year-old girl from suburban New York overdosed on methadone she bought from a 15-year-old boy.

Narcotics also played a role in adults and whites and American Indians.

■ Sales of prescription painkillers are highest in the Southeast and Northwest.

Frieden noted the wide differences between overdose death rates among states. For example, West Virginia's rate is about 26 per 100,000 while neighboring Virginia's rate is only 9.

"This highlights the importance of states getting policies right on preventing drug abuse," he said.

The dirt on soil testing

By MARY BETH BRECKENRIDGE
AKRON BEACON JOURNAL

What's in your soil?

If you don't know, you're taking a chance on the health of your plants, whether they're the trees in your yard, the grass in your lawn or the flowers or vegetables in your garden.

What's more, you could be throwing away money, wasting effort and harming the environment.

Your plants depend on the soil and its components for survival. And the only way to know the state of that soil is to have it tested.

A soil test is an indicator of its health, just as a medical test is a barometer of yours. A basic laboratory test shows the nutrients in the soil as well as its acidity or alkalinity, a factor that determines whether those nutrients are available for the plants' use.

Why test?

You can't tell what soil contains just by observing it. Sure, you can see its color and feel its texture, but you can't judge whether the soil has, say, enough nitrogen or too much lead.

If your plants don't get what they need from the soil, they'll become stressed, explained Jacqueline Kowalski, agriculture and natural resources educator with the Ohio State University Extension in Cuyahoga County. Plants under stress are more susceptible to pests and diseases, which take work and often money to treat—if you're successful. If not, you'll be laying out even more money for new plants.

So why not just fertilize the heck out of them?

For one thing, that would involve unnecessary expense. For another, overfertilizing can add too many soluble salts to the soil, drawing moisture away from plants and possibly stressing or even killing them, said Gary Horrisberger, manager of Holmes Laboratory, a private testing laboratory near Winesburg.

What's more, excess nutrients can leach or run off into the water supply, causing all manner of environmental mayhem.

Contamination dangers

Sometimes soil tests can guard the health of people, not just plants.

Tests can detect the presence of heavy metals, which can be toxic. Those metals are sometimes found in or near old industrial sites, and in vacant lots where old buildings were razed but materials were left behind, Kowalski said. Inner-city land is particularly vulnerable.

Testing your soil can ensure healthy plants as depicted in this photo illustration.

You'd definitely want to test the soil before planting food in such an area. You'd also want to test before building a playground or other facility where children might touch the soil.

In those cases, Kowalski said it's important to choose a laboratory that uses methods specified by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Who should do the test?

Kowalski recommends either a university or commercial laboratory.

You can do it yourself using a home test kit, but know that some kits tell you only the soil's pH level (that is, its acidity or alkalinity). A home kit may seem like a bargain because it contains supplies for multiple tests, but Kowalski doesn't recommend reusing the same kit over several years. If it's not stored properly, the kit may degrade, she said.

Kowalski said sending a soil sample to a soil-testing laboratory will give you more accurate readings. Perhaps more importantly, the lab will give you recommendations for fixing problems in your soil, such as telling you what type of fertilizer or amendment to add and in what quantity.

Labs typically ask you what you're growing so they can tailor their recommendations to the specific plants' needs. A lawn, for example, has different requirements from a cornfield or a perennial bed, and the lab will take those requirements into consideration. If you're changing a plot's use, tell the lab what you grew during the past year and what you want to grow there next year, Horrisberger said.

While the numbers and chemical terms in a soil test report can seem daunting to a typical gardener, most labs explain the data and offer their recommendations in plain language, Kowalski said. Commonly they'll tell you what to apply and how much, usually expressed in pounds per 1,000 square feet.

Sometimes a lab will have a sample report on its website, so you can see what you'll be getting.

What kind of test?

In most home situations, a standard soil test will tell you everything you need to know, said Jon Dahl, manager of the Soil and Plant Nutrient Laboratory at Michigan State University.

Standard tests usually cost $10 to $25.

What's included in a standard test can vary. Typically it measures pH and the levels of phosphorus, potassium, calcium and magnesium in the soil. Sometimes it includes the amount of organic matter and some fairly technical issues, such as cation-exchange capacity and base saturation. (Don't worry about what those mean. Remember, the lab should explain the results in plain language.)

If you notice problems with plants, such as leaves that are off-color or striped when they're not supposed to be, you might consider a supplemental micronutrient test, Dahl said. That test tells you the soil's level of nutrients that are used by plants in tiny quantities.

However, he cautioned that such a test will tell you only the micronutrients' status in the soil. It can't tell you whether those nutrients are actually getting into the plants. A plant tissue analysis might give you a more accurate picture, he said.

How often should you test?

Kowalski recommended testing every two to three years. You can test more often if you grow plants that are heavy feeders or you just want to keep a close eye on your soil's fertility.

Most people test their soil either in the fall or the spring. Fall is a good time, because amendments such as manure or lime that are added now will have the winter to break down, Dahl noted.

However, he said what season you choose isn't as important as always testing at the same time of year—that is, always in the spring or always in the fall.

That way, you'll get a more accurate picture if you want to track long-term trends in your soil, he said. Nutrient levels are lower right after the growing season than in the spring, so it's better to compare samplings from the same season.

Do Your Part: Pick a better cup o' joe

By TERRI BENNETT
MCCLATCHY NEWSPAPERS

Are you someone who savors that morning cup of coffee? Do you enjoy the smell and taste of a freshly brewed pot? You'll enjoy it even more if you Do Your Part to seek out fair trade and organic coffees. And fall it's the perfect time to talk about why it's critical to seek out coffees that are cultivated with people and the planet in mind.

The Fair Trade label is an important one. It certifies that the people working to produce your coffee are paid a fair price and are working in good conditions. Since many coffee producers are small-scale organizations in poorer countries, the Fair Trade program works to connect them directly to coffee importers around the world. This allows the producers to foster long lasting relationships that will help sustain their coffee businesses and improve their communities. Seeking out organic coffees is another important decision. Look for the USDA organic seal and you'll know that your coffee beans were grown without pesticides that can pollute our land and water. This also means the farmers working that land and the people living in the surrounding communities won't come into contact with those toxic chemicals, either.

There's another thing to look for when shopping for the best beans. If you can, seek out shade-grown coffees. This means the valuable land used to grow the coffee wasn't clear cut which allows the natural habitat for birds and other animals to remain intact.

So what if you don't brew your own and instead go to a coffee shop to get that morning jolt? There are still plenty of ways to Do Your Part on the go. First, ask where the beans they use come from and how the crops were cultivated. Next, bring your own coffee mug instead of using a disposable one. Many coffee spots will offer you a deal if you bring in your own cup. Starbucks and Peet's offer 10 cents off with every cup.

Many times, coffee shops will also give away their coffee grounds for free. Those grounds are rich in nitrogen, making them an effective addition to any compost pile.

Something as small as your morning cup of coffee can actually make a big impact on our environment. Do Your Part as you enjoy your next cup o' joe knowing that you picked the perfect blend for you and the planet.

Kardashian apologizes to fans for failed marriage

By SANDY COHEN
AP ENTERTAINMENT WRITER

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Kim Kardashian says she never meant to hurt anyone by ending her marriage after just 72 days.

The 31-year-old reality star posted a message to her fans on her website Tuesday, one day after filing for divorce from Kris Humphries, whom she married in a lavish ceremony that aired as a two-hour TV special on E!

Kardashian says that while she “married for love” and “would not have spent so much time on something just for a TV show,” she admits that she “got caught up with the hoopla and the filming of the TV show.”

“When I probably should have ended my relationship, I didn’t know how to and I didn’t want to disappoint a lot of people,” she writes.

Kardashian says she takes “full responsibility for my actions and decisions,” adding “it just didn’t turn out to be the fairy tale I had so badly hoped for.”

“I want a family and babies and a real life so badly that maybe I rushed into something too soon,” she says.

Kardashian and Humphries dated for nine months before marrying in August.

She goes on to say that reports that she made millions of dollars off the wedding “are simply not true and it makes me so sad to have to even clarify this.” Twitter and Facebook were filled with anti-Kardashian sentiments on Tuesday, including some photos that were reposted thousands of times.

One photo showed the happy wedding couple gazing adoringly at each other above large type that read, “If you think gay marriage cheapens the institution, two words... Kim Kardashian.”

In her post, Kardashian says she plans to “donate the money for all the gifts to the Dream Foundation.”

The couple’s $172,000 wedding registry included such items as a $1,650 coffee pot and two $1,250 sterling silver vegetable spoons.

Kardashian does not mention Humphries in the 370-word message.

Another celeb leaves ‘Dancing With the Stars’

LOS ANGELES (AP)—It was the last tango for David Arquette.

The 40-year-old actor was dismissed Tuesday from “Dancing With the Stars.”

“This whole thing has been incredible. I’ve loved it,” he said after learning he’d be leaving. “I came here to get to know more about myself, face my fears, entertain people, (give) America a chance to get to know me better and learn how to dance.”

Host Tom Bergeron said, “You’ve achieved all those goals.”

Arquette earned 47 points out of 60 for his two dances on Monday’s episode: A cha-cha that impressed the judges and a team tango that didn’t.

Judge Carrie Ann Inaba said Arquette’s cha-cha showed growth.

“Your improvement is phenomenal,” she said.

But the team dance failed to come together. Judge Len Goodman said the bulk of the routine “was a disaster.”

Arquette finished three points ahead of last-place dancer Nancy Grace, who relied on her fans to keep her in the contest.

She will return to dance again, along with Ricki Lake, J.R. Martinez, Rob Kardashian and Hope Solo.

Judges’ scores are combined with viewer votes to determine which celebrity contestant is ousted each week.

Justin Bieber also appeared on Tuesday’s episode, where he performed his song “Never Say Never” and unveiled a track from his new Christmas album, “Under the Mistletoe.” The teen star sang “Fa La La” with Boyz II Men.

Lake came into the episode in first place, performing two paso dobles: One with partner Derek Hough and another with her team that included Solo and Kardashian.

Judge Bruno Tonioli described the group routine as “powerful, moving and dramatic” and called Lake’s dance with her partner “another incredible performance.” She earned 27 points for her dance with Hough and 26 points for the team routine for a total of 53 out of 60.

Kardashian finished in second place with 51 points, turning in a tango to the “Addams Family” theme song that one judge called “your best dance so far.” After the show, he said his thoughts are with his sister Kim, who filed for divorce Monday after 10 weeks of marriage to basketball player Kris Humphries.

Solo finished in third place with 50 points.

Martinez, who has tied Lake for first place in previous weeks and held the top spot when she hasn’t, finished fourth Monday. Before Tuesday’s episode, the Tournament of Roses announced Martinez would serve as Grand Marshal for its 123rd annual parade.

Testimony ends in Michael Jackson doctor trial

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Michael Jackson’s doctor finally made a decision he had long delayed, telling a judge Tuesday he would not testify in his involuntary manslaughter trial.

Minutes later, the defense rested its case and the prosecution, after presenting brief rebuttal testimony, closed its presentation of evidence in the six-week trial. That set the stage for closing arguments to begin Thursday.

Dr. Conrad Murray’s announcement came while jurors were out of the room and he was not asked to repeat it for them.

Spectators, including Jackson’s mother, father, brother Randy and sister LaToya, seemed to hold their breath before Murray answered one of the biggest remaining questions of his trial, saying he would stay away from the witness stand.

The doctor held his hands together over his mouth in a prayerful pose before Superior Court Judge Michael Pastor asked the cardiologist whether he intended to take the stand.

The judge lectured Murray as he had before on how the decision to testify was his alone and that he also had the right to remain silent.

“Have you made up your mind?” Pastor asked.

Murray paused, looked at all his lawyers, seemed to sigh and said, “My decision is I will not testify in this matter.”

The judge asked lead attorney Ed Chernoff if he had conferred with Murray about his rights and Chernoff said yes.

“The court finds the defendant has knowingly, freely and explicitly waived his right to testify,” the judge said. “I certainly will respect that decision.”

Murray had left open the possibility of testifying on Monday, when he told the judge that he had not made a final decision.

The judge had warned him that testifying brought with it the prospect of tough cross-examination by the prosecution. That may have swayed him along with the fact that the jury already had a chance to hear him tell his story on a recording of a police interview.

When jurors returned to the courtroom, Chernoff announced that the defense had no further witnesses after calling 16 people to testify. A total of 49 witnesses testified for both sides over 22 days of trial.

Prosecutors contend Murray gave Jackson a fatal dose of the anesthetic propofol in the bedroom of the singer’s mansion. Defense attorneys claim Jackson self-administered the dose when Murray left the room.

The last witness was propofol expert Dr. Steven Shafer, who was re-called by prosecutors as a rebuttal witness to address a few points raised by his former colleague Dr. Paul White.

In the final moments of testimony by White, he was asked by defense attorney J. Michael Flanagan to differentiate between the “standard of care” and the “standard of practice” by physicians.

Synopsis
When scientists unlock the secret to immortality, time becomes the new currency and one desperate man comes under attack from a mysterious group known only as the “Time Keepers.” In the not-too-distant future, scientists have discovered a way to turn off the aging gene. As the threat of overpopulation looms over society, money becomes a thing of the past. Now, assets are measured in time; those with the most time also possess the most power. Meanwhile, the lower classes are forced to barter with the new elite if they want to live forever. Suddenly a young commoner stumbles across a treasure chest of time. With the “Time Keepers” in hot pursuit, however, he may never get a chance to use it. Justin Timberlake, Amanda Seyfried, and Olivia Wilde star in this sci-fi thriller from writer/director Andrew Niccol (Gattaca, Lord of War).

Charice calls for justice for slain dad

MANILA, Philippines (AP)—Singer Charice Pempengco of the hit TV show “Glee” is calling for justice for her father who was stabbed to death in her Philippine hometown.

Police on Wednesday launched a manhunt for the suspect, who they say was intoxicated when he became angry after 40-year-old construction worker Ricky Pempengco brushed against him. Pempengco was stabbed late Monday with an ice pick in the chest and back.

Charice paid respects to her estranged father early Wednesday and apologized for canceling the rest of her tour dates. She was scheduled to perform in Singapore.

The teen star said, “Whoever did this must be brought to justice.”

She said she was in disbelief and while she did not have time to bond with her father, they had a great relationship.

Charice said Tuesday in a statement she wants to thank her fans around the world “for their support and love at this very difficult time.”

The 19-year-old starred on “Glee” last season and was touring in Southeast Asia. She cancelled the rest of the tour dates and has flown to the Philippines to be with her family.

Zoey Deschanel separates from musician husband

NEW YORK (AP)—Actress Zoey Deschanel and her husband, musician Ben Gibbard, are breaking up.

Deschanel’s publicist Lauren Auslander confirmed Tuesday the couple has separated after two years of marriage. Auslander describes the split as “amicable,” with “no third party involved.”

Deschanel’s career is on a high note with the success of her Fox sitcom “New Girl.” Her band She & Him just released a Christmas album, and last month she sang the national anthem at the World Series.

Gibbard is the lead singer of the rock band Death Cab for Cutie.

News of the separation was first reported by Us Weekly.

Childhood piano lessons: same song, second verse

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYNDICATE

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I had to respond to the letter from “Discordant Family” (Sept. 1). I agree with you that the children should not be forced to play piano. However, let me offer an alternative. Many young pianists quit because practicing is such a solitary chore. I’d recommend finding the kids a community music program they would enjoy.

Perhaps their friends are involved with a chamber or duet group, or a music camp. Set the completion of the group project as a goal and allow them to move on (if they still want to) once they’ve reached that goal rather than quit on the spot.

I, too, wanted to quit piano lessons at 13, but my mother insisted I persist until age 16. Then I joined my high school’s theater program as its pianist. Being part of community music-making is standard for most musicians, but it’s rare for young pianists. There is an added social element. They develop other skills, and the emphasis on practice and perfection is greatly reduced when the focus shifts to working well in a group.

Since “Discordant” is so set on music for her kids, I hope she’ll consider this option, but also identify the aspects of piano playing her kids dislike and attempt to reduce or remove them. Switching from classical to pop music or starting a band with their friends are other possibilities.

I’m 26 now and have made a career as a collaborative pianist for musical theater, operas, choirs and soloist accompaniment. It’s given me an opportunity to travel, meet Broadway actors, play in rock bands, learn language skills—and more!

HAPPY PIANIST IN AUSTIN

DEAR PIANIST: Thank you for your helpful suggestions. Forcing children to do something they hate seems, to me, counterproductive when there are so many constructive, creative things they could be doing. My newspaper readers comment:

DEAR ABBY: Each child is unique and needs individual consideration. Because the 13-year-old wants to stop playing the piano is no reason for the 11- and 5-year-old to quit, too. How about talking it over with the piano teacher? Maybe it’s time for a new approach. The teen could learn to play jazz piano or perhaps switch to a different instrument, such as the guitar. Making music part of life is a joy when it is approached in the right spirit.

PIANO TEACHER WHO HAS SEEN AND HEARD IT ALL

DEAR ABBY: I took lessons from three teachers before I found one who inspired me and gave me music I wanted to play. My son and daughter also took lessons from him. I played piano professionally in the ‘60s and ‘70s, and my son has followed in that path. I believe it is all in finding the right teacher. What a difference it makes.

JANET IN ST. LOUIS

DEAR ABBY: “Discordant” said she has never met anyone who was glad about having stopped piano lessons. Well, one of the happiest days of my life was when I quit. I read music and hit the keys in order, but I have no sense of timing. Practice did NOT make perfect, and I was prevented from applying myself to areas for which I was better suited.

FREED FROM THE TORTURE

DEAR ABBY: The problem that mom is having is in giving her kids wiggle room. Middle-school-aged children should not be allowed to make a decision about something so important based on how they “feel.” I sweetened the offer for my daughter by allowing her to practice in lieu of doing some household chores. It worked like a charm. Now, at 21, she loves music, plays when she can and intends to return to it after college.

STAND FIRM! IN MONTANA

DEAR ABBY: I was forced to take piano lessons. At age 13, I begged to quit. My parents made a compromise. Lessons only during the school year, summers off. After a poor start, I began to enjoy the lessons, ended up studying piano for 18 years and turned pro.

Hugh Grant becomes a dad, but mother undisclosed

LONDON (AP)—Hugh Grant has become a father for the first time after a brief fling, his spokesman said Tuesday—but the identity of the baby’s mother is not being disclosed.

Publicist Carrie Gordon said Grant “is the delighted father of a baby girl.”

She said Grant and the mother “had a fleeting affair and while this was not planned, Hugh could not be happier or more supportive.”

“He and the mother have discussed everything and are on very friendly terms,” Gordon said.

The 51-year-old star of “Four Weddings and a Funeral” and “Notting Hill” previously had relationships with model-actress Elizabeth Hurley and socialite-turned-campaigner Jemima Khan.

Grant, who built a career playing bumbling British charmers, last appeared in a movie opposite Sarah Jessica Parker in the 2009 comedy “Did You Hear About the Morgans.”

More recently he has become a high-profile opponent of intrusion by Britain’s tabloid press.

Grant has said he suspects his cell phone voice mail messages were intercepted by journalists, and has campaigned for tighter regulation of the news industry.

He has appeared regularly on television to denounce phone hacking by Rupert Murdoch’s now-defunct News of the World, held talks with Prime Minister David Cameron on the subject and is lined up to give evidence at a judge-led inquiry into the hacking scandal.

Giant Russian painting of Indian mosque sold in NY

NEW YORK (AP)—A giant painting by a Russian artist has fetched more than $3.1 million at auction in New York City.

The “Pearl Mosque at Delhi” painting was sold Tuesday at a Sotheby’s auction of Russian art.

The painting is 13 feet (3.9 meters) high by 16 feet (4.8 meters) wide. It was done between 1876 and 1879. It shows men kneeling at an Indian mosque.

It was offered by the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston and had a presale estimate of $3 million to $5 million.

The auction house says the proceeds will benefit the museum’s acquisition fund.

The painting is by artist Vasili Vasilievich Vereshchagin. It’s from his Indian series and is considered one of his most significant works to appear at auction in more than 100 years.

This circa 1880 image provided by Sotheby’s shows Russian artist Vasili Vasilievich Vereshchagin in his Paris studio with “Pearl Mosque at Delhi,” right, a giant painting about 13 feet high and 16 feet wide.

SHOWBIZ TIDBITS

Yoko Ono: ‘Imagine’ tune is bigger than expected

NEW YORK (AP)—Yoko Ono says John Lennon’s iconic “Imagine” wasn’t initially embraced by the public. She says the song, released in 1971, “was not really accepted ... it wasn’t ‘Wow!’” Ono, who is listed as a co-producer on the track, says she remembers when Lennon created it, calling that time “really beautiful.” Lennon’s 78-year-old widow made the comments at the launch of Hard Rock and WhyHunger’s “Imagine There’s No Hunger” campaign in New York City’s Times Square on Tuesday. The global campaign aims to raise money and awareness for childhood hunger and poverty in Africa, Asia and Latin America. In 2004, Rolling Stone magazine ranked “Imagine” at No. 3 on its list of “The 500 Greatest Songs of All Time.”

Tito Jackson: We tried to intervene for Michael

LONDON (AP)—Two of Michael Jackson’s siblings say they tried to intervene to prevent his drug abuse but could not get close to their brother because of his security team. Tito and Rebbie Jackson said Tuesday the family was aware of Michael’s drug problem. Tito Jackson says his late brother’s security team acted as if he was the U.S. president and kept his family away. He says he got into physical fights with security personnel and was sometimes barred from his brother’s gated property. The two Jacksons are in London to promote Wednesday’s premiere of a documentary about his life. Their mother Katherine Jackson canceled her trip to London to attend the final days of the Los Angeles trial of Dr. Conrad Murray, accused of manslaughter in the pop star’s death.

Jerry Seinfeld first guest host to follow Philbin

NEW YORK (AP)—Regis Philbin’s chair on “Live!” won’t have time to cool off before Jerry Seinfeld arrives as the first guest host of the post-Regis era. The popular weekday talk show is announcing that Seinfeld will join continuing co-host Kelly Ripa for three days, airing Nov. 21-23. The show said Tuesday that guests scheduled to join Ripa and Seinfeld are actor Jason Segal, actress Kim Cattrall, comedian-host Howie Mandel, “Naked Chef” Jamie Oliver and that fabulous Muppet, Miss Piggy. Philbin is departing the show Nov. 18 after 28 years as its host. There are no plans to immediately announce a permanent successor. The soon-to-be-renamed “Live! with Kelly” will continue to air in most cities at 9 a.m. Eastern time.

3 Dodgers, 3 Red Sox earn Gold Glove honors

NEW YORK (AP)—Clayton

Kershaw, Matt Kemp and Andre Ethier became the first trio of Los Angeles Dodgers to win NL Gold Gloves in the same year, and Adrian Gonzalez, Dustin Pedroia and Jacoby Ellsbury became the first three Red Sox in 32 seasons to win the AL honor together.

Kershaw became a first-time winner at pitcher when the awards were announced Tuesday. Ethier earned his first Gold Glove in the outfield and Kemp regained the NL award he also earned in 2009.

Gonzalez earned his first AL Gold Glove to go along with two he won in the NL while with San Diego. Pedroia won at second base for the first time since 2008 and Ellsbury picked up his first Gold Glove.

"I try to be a complete player. You can always go into offense slumps," Gonzalez said during the awards show on ESPN2.

The previous three Red Sox to win in the same year were shortstop Rick Burleson along with outfielders Dwight Evans and Fred Lynn in 1979.

Chicago White Sox pitcher Mark Buehrle was the lone AL holdover, winning for the third straight year. Baltimore's Matt Wieters won at catcher, the Angels' Erick Aybar at shortstop, Texas' Adrian Beltre at third, and Kansas City's Alex Gordon and Baltimore's Nick Markakis in the outfield.

Beltre won for the third time, after gaining the award in 2007 and 2008.

The St. Louis Cardinals' Yadier Molina became the first NL catcher to win in four

Granderson slam leads MLB stars to Taiwan win

XINZHUANG, Taiwan (AP)—Curtis Granderson hit a grand slam to lead a team of major league stars to a 7-0 win over Taiwan's national team on Tuesday night.

The Yankees slugger went deep off Yao-Hsun Yang in the third inning, electrifying the crowd at the suburban Taipei stadium before the game was called in the sixth inning because of rain.

The five-game series between MLB stars including Yankees second baseman Robinson Cano, Giants third baseman Pablo Sandoval and Orioles pitcher Jeremy Guthrie resumes on Thursday.

The teams will play twice in the central Taiwanese city of Taichung before moving onto the southern city of Kaohsiung for two weekend matchups.

The trip offers MLB a chance straight years since Charles Johnson from 1995-98.

Cincinnati first baseman Joey Votto and second baseman Brandon Phillips also won along with Colorado shortstop Troy Tulowitzki, Philadelphia third baseman Placido Polanco and Arizona outfielder Gerardo Parra. Phillips and Tulowitzki joined Molina as the NL holdovers, with Phillips winning for the third time in four years.

"It just shows my hard work really played off," Phillips said on the show.

Polanco also won AL Gold Gloves in 2007 and 2009.

This year's AL group displaced Minnesota catcher Joe Mauer; Yankees first baseman Mark Teixeira, second baseman Robinson Cano and shortstop Derek Jeter; Tampa Bay third baseman Evan Longoria; former Rays outfielder Carl Crawford; and Seattle outfielders Ichiro Suzuki and Franklin Gutierrez.

Suzuki's streak of Gold Gloves ended at 10. The right fielder, who had won in every one of his big league seasons, had tied the AL record for Gold Gloves by an outfielder shared by Ken Griffey Jr. and Al Kaline.

Last year's NL winners included Cardinals first baseman Albert Pujols, Reds third baseman Scott Rolen and Colorado's Carlos Gonzalez and Philadelphia's Shane Victorino joined in the outfield by Michael Bourn, then of Houston.

Rawlings announced the winners Tuesday. Managers and coaches vote for players in their leagues and can't pick players on their own teams.

Breaking with the recent format, outfielders were picked for specific spots. The AL had Gordon in left, Ellsbury in center and Markakis in right, and the NL had Parra in left, Kemp in center and Ethier in right.

Beltre and Gonzalez each earned $100,000 bonuses, while Aybar and Markakis get $75,000 apiece. Molina, Pedroia, Polanco and Votto each receive $50,000, and Tulowitzki and Buehrle both get $25,000.

Phillips gets an automatic $250,000 raise next season to $12.25 million under the option the Reds exercised Monday.

After re-signing with Yanks, Cashman seeks arm

NEW YORK (AP)—His major offseason goal already accomplished, Yankees general manager Brian Cashman is still hunting for more starting pitching as he reshapes the team following its first-round elimination.

Cashman signed a three-year contract worth about $9 million Tuesday, a day after his previous deal expired. The announcement came less than 24 hours after CC Sabathia chose not to become a free agent and instead agreed to a contract that gave him an additional $30 million guaranteed for 2016.

"He's certainly the most important piece as we entered this process," Cashman said during a conference call. "CC provides us a lot of security, and that's obviously why he makes what he makes."

A weak free-agent class for pitchers is headed by Edwin Jackson, C.J. Wilson, Mark Buehrle and Hiroki Kuroda. Bats are more plentiful, with Albert Pujols, Prince Fielder, Jose Reyes and Carlos Beltran on the market.

"Pitching, pitching, pitching. That will be the main thrust," Cashman said, a sign the Yankees could explore trades involving low-priced players such as Jesus Montero and Brett Gardner. "I don't anticipate a bat being of need at all. I anticipate people knocking on our door about the current bats we have."

On other topics, Cashman said A.J. Burnett is likely to remain with the Yankees and stay in the rotation; wouldn't say whether the team intends to re-sign 40-year-old Jorge Posada; praised catcher Russell Martin but wouldn't say whether he will offer a multiyear contract; said he's open to re-signing pitchers Freddy Garcia and Bartolo Colon, and third baseman Eric Chavez; and wouldn't commit to whether the Yankees would have an interest in Japanese pitcher Yu Darvish, who may become available in the posting process from the Nippon Ham Fighters.

Cashman has been GM since February 1998, when he succeeded Bob Watson.

The only general manager to serve longer with the Yankees is Ed Barrow from 1920-45.

Under Cashman, the team has won four World Series titles and six AL pennants, finishing first in the AL East 11 times and advancing to the playoffs in 13 of 14 seasons. He's presided over baseball operations during the transition from George Steinbrenner to the more collegial environment established by son Hal Steinbrenner.

"I have a big seat at the table, but I don't sit at the head of the table," Cashman said. "I know my place. I know my job description. I know my responsibilities. And I know my abilities to make recommendations. They carry a lot of weight. It doesn't necessarily carry the day every day. I respect and understand that."

Without giving any specifics, Cashman touched on several players:

■ On Posada: "He's been one of the best catchers in Yankee history and a borderline Hall of Famer and obviously is in the free-agent category currently. So I think that's something that we'll have to discuss here in the short term but it's not something I'm prepared to talk to about today."

■ On Martin: "He came in here and we thought he was Thurman Munson-like. I wasn't here in the '70s, but you know what Thurman Munson stood for, represented, how he played the game and leadership that he provided in the clubhouse."

■ On Burnett: "He's had to deal with adversity because of the inconsistent performance. He hasn't shied away from it and he continues to take that ball every five days and do everything he possibly can to secure a win and be the best he could possibly be. ... I expect him to be in the rotation going forward."

■ On right fielder Nick Swisher, whose option was exercised Saturday: "He has been one of the better offensive right fielders in the game ever since he's been here. ... We're lucky to have him. It was any easy call."

No movement on day NBA season would have started

NEW YORK (AP) -- No KD vs. Kobe, no championship banner in Dallas.

The original start date to the NBA season arrived Tuesday with progress still stalled in the negotiations to end the lock-out. No further talks have been scheduled, a person familiar with the situation told The Associated Press.

The person spoke on condition of anonymity because the plans have not been made public.

Players and owners made progress on a number of issues related to the salary cap system over two days last week. But the negotiations fell apart again on the third day, when the sides decided to revisit the revenue sharing split.

Owners are insistent on a 50-50 split, while players have proposed reducing their guarantee from 57 percent down to 52.5, which they say would transfer more than $1.5 billion to owners over six years.

Three games had been scheduled for Tuesday. The Mavericks would have opened the defense of their first NBA title at home against Derrick Rose and the Chicago Bulls. Houston was at Utah, with Kevin Durant's Thunder at Kobe Bryant's Lakers. Most of league would have started Wednesday.

Instead, TNT was airing a "Bones" marathon Tuesday night.

Commissioner David Stern canceled games through the end of November on Friday. The first two weeks of the season already had been lost to the lock-out, which began after the old collective bargaining agreement expired June 30.

A day after union president Derek Fisher sent out a letter to players assuring them of leadership's unity, players' association executive director Billy Hunter did the same. In the letter, obtained by The Associated Press and other media outlets and first reported by ESPN.

com, Hunter contended a 50-50 split "does not adequately compensate the players for our services to the NBA."

"We will not be intimidated by public threats, ultimatums and manufactured drop dead dates," he wrote.

With no NBA games to play, Durant was still finding ways to compete and challenge fellow hoops stars.

Durant tweeted Monday he was interested in playing flag football. When fans at Oklahoma State University offered an invitation, he showed up in Stillwater that night to play. He tweeted later that he threw four touchdown passes and had three interceptions in a victory.

Then on Tuesday, LeBron James sent a tweet to the Thunder star that he was interested in setting up a flag football showdown between Durant's team and his own squad in Akron, Ohio. Durant answered that his team was ready and James should set it up.

Raiders sign WR Houshmandzadeh

ALAMEDA, Calif. (AP)—The Oakland Raiders signed wide receiver T.J. Houshmandzadeh to a contract on Tuesday, reuniting him with his former quarterback Carson Palmer.

Palmer and Houshmandzadeh were teammates in Cincinnati for six seasons and both had their greatest NFL success when they were together.

Houshmandzadeh, 34, had been out of the league since playing with Baltimore last season but had been working out in Southern California with Palmer before the Raiders (4-3) acquired the quarterback last month.

Houshmandzadeh is also very familiar with Raiders coach Hue Jackson, who was the receiver coach in Cincinnati for three years during Houshmandzadeh's tenure there.

Houshmandzadeh averaged 89 catches over a five-year span in Cincinnati. His best season came in 2007, when he caught a career-high 112 passes for 1,143 yards and 12 touchdowns.

But he struggled after leaving the Bengals. He had 79 catches for 911 yards and three touchdowns in Seattle in 2009 before bottoming out last season with the Ravens when he had only 30 catches for 398 yards and three touchdowns. His tenure in Baltimore ended with a key fourth-down drop in a playoff loss to Pittsburgh last January.

"He's a guy that made a lot of catches when it was sticky," Jackson said Monday before Houshmandzadeh signed. "With people draped all over him, he made some uncommon plays for us in Cincinnati. That's all I can go by in Cincinnati. I did not coach him in Seattle, I did not coach him in Baltimore. That's why I have to take a great look at the player. It's been a while."

He apparently liked what he saw because the Raiders signed him. Houshmandzadeh gives Oakland a veteran receiver on a unit that is mostly young and unproven.

Third-year player Darrius Heyward-Bey leads the team with 27 catches for 434 yards, but no other wide receiver has more than 15 catches so far this season. Speedster Jacoby Ford (notes) has been slowed by various injuries, rookie Denarius Moore had a fast start before leveling off, veteran Derek Hagan has one catch in the past three weeks, Louis Murphy (notes) has no catches in his two games and Chaz Schilens has caught more than two passes just once all season and missed the most recent game with a hamstring injury.

It's not immediately clear how quickly Houshmandzadeh can step in and contribute but his rapport with Palmer and knowledge of what Jackson likes to do should help speed the transition. The Raiders were off Tuesday before resuming practice Wednesday to prepare for this weekend's home game against Denver.

"He's a player. That might be a nice fit right there," cornerback Stanford Routt (notes) said Monday when told that Houshmandzadeh was working out with the team. "Our receivers are doing real good right now, in my opinion, with the explosiveness and all the young guys that we got. There are so many, I can't even name them all. Just adding one more play-maker to the puzzle, I don't see how that can do anything but make us even better."

Meanwhile, wide receiver Brian Robiskie has been sent on his final down-and-out by the Browns.

A former second-round draft pick, Robiskie was waived

Tuesday by Cleveland to make room for free agent running back Thomas Clayton, who played in two games for them last season and has been brought back because of injuries to Peyton Hillis, and Montario Hardesty.

The Browns selected Robiskie with the No. 36 overall pick in 2009 out of Ohio State. A former ballboy for the Browns when his father, Terry, was a Cleveland assistant and later the team's interim head coach, Robiskie caught seven passes as a rookie. Last year, he made 11 starts and finished with 29 catches for 310 yards and three touchdowns.

However, the 24-year-old's role was reduced this season and he has steadily slipped down first-year coach Pat Shurmur's depth chart.

With Hillis and Hardesty injured, the Browns were in dire need of a running back and signed Clayton, a player with whom they have some background. On Tuesday, the Browns had running backs in for workouts at their training facility in Berea before settling on and signing Clayton, who was active in two games for Cleveland in 2010.

Hardesty is expected to miss games after tearing a calf muscle during Sunday's 20-10 loss in San Francisco. Hillis remains slowed by a hamstring injury that has kept him out of Cleveland's past two games. On Monday, Shurmur said Hardesty would be sidelined for an indefinite period. Hillis' status for this week's game at Houston is uncertain.

Clayton was with Seattle during the preseason before he was released. He will join Chris Ogbonnaya in Cleveland's backfield until Hardesty or Hillis gets healthy. Ogbonnaya has only been with the team since Oct. 18, when he was signed off the Texans' practice squad.

Lions' Suh appreciates chance to talk with Goodell

DETROIT (AP)—Ndamukong Suh got his wish.

Detroit's star defensive tackle met with NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell and his staff Tuesday to clarify questions about his play and the game.

"I have gained a better understanding how I need to continue to play the game to help my team win," Suh said in a statement. "I look forward to the rest of the season and doing everything we can to bring the Lombardi Trophy to Detroit."

Detroit, aiming for its first postseason appearance this century, is 6-2 for the first time since 2007 and next plays Nov. 13 at Chicago. The Lions haven't won an NFL title since 1956, but Suh and his teammates are playing and talking with a lot of swagger these days.

Suh requested the bye-week session in New York at NFL headquarters to talk about the flags and fines he has received. He was joined by Lions coach Jim Schwartz and team president Tom Lewand, according to Goodell.

The league said senior vice president of football operations Ray Anderson, football operations consultant Jeff Fisher, vice president of officiating Carl Johnson and vice president of football operations Merton Hanks represented the NFL during the session.

"Ndamukong plays the game with great skill and passion and is a major reason for the Lions' success this year," Goodell said in a statement. "In the course of our dialogue today, we reviewed video showing that Ndamukong has clearly made the adjustments to play consistently within the rules so that he can continue to help the team. We commend Ndamukong's leadership in taking the initiative to schedule today's meeting."

Suh's rough play has led to $42,500 in fines since Detroit drafted him No. 2 overall out of Nebraska in 2009.

In August, he was fined a third time for roughing up a third quarterback in less than a year after grabbing Cincinnati quarterback Andy Dalton and throwing him to the turf after he had gotten rid of the ball. Suh vowed back then he wouldn't "by any means" change his game. He was fined twice last year for hits on Chicago's Jay Cutler during the regular season and Cleveland's Jake Delhomme in a preseason game. He shoved Cutler hard and high in the back and twisted Delhomme's face mask and slammed him to the ground.

Suh has been able to absorb the financial hits, making $40 million guaranteed with a chance to get paid as much as $68 million in his five-year contract.

He previously expressed sympathy for officials who try to determine if he's playing within the rules.

"I really feel like I put the refs in a tough situation because of my strength," Suh said during the preseason.

Suh was the only rookie on the All-Pro team last season and is the reigning NFL Defensive Rookie of the Year.

He leads a defensive line with plenty of talented players, including defensive end Cliff Avril, the NFC defensive player of the week. Avril became the first Detroit defensive player to win the award since Shaun Rogers in 2007.

Pacquiao ready to go for third fight against Marquez

H O L L Y - WOOD, California (AP)--Manny Pacquiao is normally mild-mannered when it comes to addressing future fights and opponents, but he admits he wants to thoroughly beat Juan Manuel Marquez when the two fight Nov. 11 in Las Vegas and leave no doubt he is the best pound-for-pound fighter.

Pacquiao said he's been looking forward to this fight ever since Marquez wore a shirt which read, "Marquez Beat Pacquiao Twice!!" last November after defeating Michael Katsidis to retain his lightweight titles. Pacquiao defeated Marquez by a split decision in 2008, and their first fight in 2004 ended in a draw.

"He's been claiming that he's won the last two fights," Pacquiao said. "I need to go in and end all these issues. This fight will be the answer to all the doubts and all the issues he's been screaming for."

There is a picture of Marquez wearing the shirt behind the speed bag Pacquiao hits every day at the Wild Card Boxing Club in Hollywood. As Pacquiao pummeled the bag on Wednesday, his eyes were transfixed on the picture as his trainer Freddie Roach looked on.

"This is the best I've ever seen him," Roach said. "He really has a grudge because Marquez wore those 'I Beat Pacquiao Twice' shirts in the Philippines and started campaigning that he got robbed. Manny doesn't dislike anyone in the world, but this guy slapped him in the face a little bit and payback's a b-----."

Roach put the picture of Marquez wearing the shirt behind the speed bag when they began training. He thought it would soon be removed, but a week before the fight the photo is still there.

"I thought he would take it down," Roach said. "But he looks at it every day and smiles. He has that little extra spark right now because he wants that payback."

MATANSA

Matansa, which absorbed its first loss at the hands of Shirley's FC in Week 5, 0-1, regrouped against Tan Holdings to improve to a 4-0-1 win-draw-loss card—one win ahead of the second-running Shirley's FC.

Jace Pineda scored the lone goal in the match to deny Tan Holding's bid for its first win in the season. Tan Holdings holds a 0-1-4 slate.

MP United 3, Paire FC 0

In the other girls U15 match, MP United shut out Paire FC.

Hae Ri Kim made twin goals for MP United, while Jamie Mariano contributed one. MP United kept the No. 3 spot in the team standings with its 2-2-1 card, while Paire dropped to a 1-0-4 record for fourth place.

Mariano gave MP United its first goal and Kim also scored in the first half for MP United's 2-0 lead. Kim found the back of the net anew in the second half, bringing MP United's total goals in five games to 10.

BOYS U15 Matansa 6, Tan Holdings 5

Over at the Hopwood Junior High School Field, Matansa ended Tan Holdings FC's winning run.

Tan Holdings came into the Hopwood pitch undefeated in three games and seemed headed for another win after leading at the break, 3-2. However, Matansa drew two goals from David Bucayo in the second half and Jireh Yobech and Evans Belcher added one apiece to steal the win.

With the victory, Matansa improved to a 3-1-1 slate and bumped off Tan Holdings (3-1-0) in second place. MP United 1 is at the No. 1 spot with its perfect 5-0-0 record.

Tan Holdings FC led at half-time after drawing a hat-trick from Tanapon Unsa. Jobech scored the two goals for Matansa in the first 45 minutes of play.

In the second half, Tan Holdings failed to keep the driver's seat, as Unsa was held to one field goal. Tan Holding's other goal in the second half came from Isaac Anderson.

Paire FC 2, MP United 2 1

In the second game in the boys U15, Paire edged MP United.

Paire gained its third win in five games to share the No. 3 spot with Tan Holdings, while MP United remained in fourth place with its 1-2-2 card.

Brian Lee posted the first goal for Paire in the opening frame and Chris Park hit the equalizer for MP United 2. In the second half, Jeff Cheon broke into the scoreboard to lift Paire to victory.

Shirleys 2 3, Shirley's 1 0

In the battle of sister teams, the all-female crew of Shirley's 2 downed Shirley's 1.

The win was Shirley's 1 first in six games, while Shirley's 2 finished the first round of the fall league winless in six matches.

Reylynn Sapong canned two goals for Shirley's 2, while Glorily Williams scored the other goal.

Meanwhile, the lone boys U18 match between MP United and Matansa were called off due to the unplayable Oleai Sports Complex Field.

Both Commonwealth bets will be racing in two events with Kensuke Kimura entered in the 100m individual medley and 50m freestyle swims of the short course tournament (25-meter pool). Tenorio will be competing in the 50m breaststroke and 50m freestyle races. The younger Kimura's PBT in the 100m IM and 50m freestyle read at 1:03.25 and 26.53 seconds respectively, while Tenorio holds PBs of 32.23 seconds in the 50m breaststroke and 27.08 seconds in the 50m freestyle.

Hiro Kimura added that having a new PBT in the 50m breaststroke will give Tenorio more confidence in beating Renze Wong's long course record in the same event (31.62 seconds).

"A new PBT will move Shigeki one big step towards surpassing Rezne's record," the Tsunami coach said.

As for his son, Kensuke, the older Kimura said the FINA World Cup meet will give the 15-year-old swimmer another opportunity to compete in a short course tournament.

"He was scheduled to compete in the Tokyo Sprint early this year and go for PBs, but the event was cancelled due to the earthquake. He trained hard for several months for that event. Now, he has another chance to join a short course meet through the FINA World Cup and it will be precious to him," the older Kimura said.

"Kensuke will aim to break Rezne's record of 1:02.54 in the 100m IM event in the Japan Open in 2009. At that time, Rezne was 17 years old, so for a 15-year-old swimmer like Kensuke, it is a very big challenge," the Tsunami Saipan coach added.

Hiro Kimura hopes that after the FINA World Cup, Kensuke and Tenorio will compete in more off-island tournaments to improve their skills and share their experience to younger swimmers.

"When our swimmers go off island and compete in international tournaments, they get to learn new techniques from world-class athletes. Then when our swimmers return to Saipan, they not only practice these new skills, but also share them to their teammates," Hiro Kimura said.

Competitors in the Tokyo tournament include winners in the first four of the seven-leg World Cup series. The first four events took place in Dubai, Sweden, Russia, and Germany. Tomorrow, the fifth leg will start in Singapore (Nov. 4 and 5), while the sixth will move to Beijing, China (Nov. 8 to 9) before the last stop in Tokyo.

The grand winner of the series will take home $100,000 (each for men's and women's). Points are awarded to swimmers in each leg and these will be tallied after the Tokyo event to determine the men's and women's champions.

The Marianas High School LadyDolphins pummeled the Saipan International School Lady Geckos, 65-26, during the lone game in the 2011-2012 Marianas Interscholastic Sports Organization Basketball League last Tuesday at the MHS Gymnasium.

The thought of MHS defending its varsity championship is becoming more and more apparent, as it is now a lock for first place with a flawless 5-0 record. The Lady Dolphins have one more game left in the double-round regular season. The Lady Geckos dropped to a 1-3 slate, losing their last three games after winning their season debut.

Jaime Mendoza caught fire for MHS right after the tip with a string of seven points, while Melody Johnson added six, giving the Lady Dolphins a commanding 19-8 lead after the first 10 minutes of play.

The Dolphins kept it rolling in the second quarter and catapulted ahead at halftime, 37-18. Johnson added six more points in the second quarter push, while Zoe Jewell and Amber Roberts managed just a handful of markers in the first half for SIS.

At the second half, MHS was still unforgiving on defense and contained SIS to six points in the third quarter to pull away, 57-24, with only a quarter left in the one-sided match.

The game was well out of reach by the start of the last period, as SIS was Grace Christian Academy kept its perfect record after sweeping Marianas High School's QT's in their game last Monday in the 2011-2012 Marianas Interscholastic Sports Organization Boys Volleyball League at the MHS Gymnasium.

The Eagles are unbeaten in 10 games. They started strong against MHS QT's, taking the opening set, 25-12. Then in the second set, GCA prevailed anew, 25-19, for the automatic win. The Eagles went on to complete the sweep after a 15-9 victory in the third set.

With its 10-0 record, GCA holds a two-game lead over Saipan International School, while MHS QT's evened its card to 5-5. SIS bested Kagman High School and comfortably remains in second place with its 9-2 record.

The Geckos edged Kagman in the opening set, 25-21, for the early advantage and claimed the outright win after a 25-15 victory in the second set. The Ayuyus avoided a shutout loss when they took the third set, 15-9. Kagman is now in third place in the team standings, tied with MHS QT's.

In other results, Saipan Southern High School split its twin games last Monday. The Manta Rays first faced MHS Fins and lost the game early when the latter won the first two sets, 25-12, 25-15, to improve to a 4-7 record.
